The Secret To Success

By PAT ANGLE

(First of Two Articles)

While many small markets have closed their doors as their customers drifted away to large, modern supermarkets, Willie Yee's Marin Fruit and Grocery in Sausalito is still going strong after 50 years.

The secret of the little shop's success goes beyond the beautiful fruits and vegetables which Willie as he is known to everyone has supplied to three generations of Sausalitans. Even the store's neat, well-stocked shelves with their little bit of everything are not its major drawing card.

Marin Fruit's customers have remained faithful for one reason: Willie himself. To many old-time residents - and a large number of new ones - Willie Yee is a man whose honesty, friendliness, service and kindness are nostalgically reminiscent of another era when people had time to help their neighbors.

Ask Sausalitans who have known Willie for 30, 40 or 50 years their opinion of him and the response is likely to be overwhelming as old friends try to find adjectives adequate to describe the city's best liked businessman.

A typical assessment of Willie's character came from Mrs. W. Robert Miller who has shopped at Marin Fruit for more years than she cares to remember. "He is the sweetest, dearest person in the world, one of the people who is part of your family," Mrs. Miller said.

"Willie kept food on our table, even though we couldn't pay him at the time," said May Chapman who came to Sausalito with her mother during the Great Depression and - like countless others - could find no work. "He carried half the town on credit in those days," Mrs. Chapman recalls.

Robert Gunn, another long-time resident, feels the same. "Willie has always been dependable, helpful and cheerful," Gunn said. "He would never let anybody go without because of a little thing like money."

Deputy City Clerk Wilma Young calls him "a prince of a person, generous, public-spirited and good-hearted in a very quiet way; my husband (Allyn) and I count ourselves lucky to have him as a friend."

The list of Willie's kind deeds through the years seems endless and every person you ask is eager to tell the ways in which the grocer helped them in time of needs.

Mrs. Cyril Hansen is but one of many. She remembers most vividly a Friday evening in 1946 when "my brother called from Illinois and told me" I would have to come home immediate-

Nixon Brands Violence As A Tactic Of 'Thugs'

Toughest Stand Yet On Violent Dissent

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — President Nixon said today it is time to quit making "automatic heroes out of those who protest" and brand them as the "same thugs and hoodlums that have always plagued a good people.

"It's about time we cut out this nonsense about repression being the cause of violence," Nixon said in his toughest and bluntest statement yet on the subject of violent dissent.

"As long as I am President, no band of violent thugs is going to keep me from going out and speaking with the American people wherever they want to hear me and wherever I want to go."

The speech, prepared for delivery at GOP rally in Phoenix, was the president's answer to the "haters who surged past the barricades and began throwing rocks" at his limousine during a Northern California stop Thursday night.

He said it was appeasement and permissiveness rather than the Vietnam war and repression which encourages the violent minority among the nation's youth and put forward his own approach for dealing with the problem—"The strong application of fair American justice."

"If a man chooses to dress differently or wear his hair differently or talk in a way that repels decent people—that's his business," Nixon said. "But

'Hatred' Held Powder Keg At San Jose

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI)—Organizers of an antiwar rally say a "wave of hatred" ignited a violent attack on President Nixon's motorcade.

"It was so strong the crowd could feel it," one of the rally's leaders said Friday. He said the crowd erupted when they saw Nixon emerge from the San Jose Municipal Auditorium, climb aboard the hood of his limousine and wave both arms, his fingers flashing the "V" symbol.

And that's when hecklers began hurling eggs, rocks and bottles at the motorcade. The President reported that an egg brushed his face, but Secret Service agents said the object was a small rock.

Police chief Ray Blackmore estimated that some 900 persons were in the crowd that was screaming and hurling objects at the motorcade. Calling it the worst mob action in San Jose in recent years, Blackmore said the crowd came within minutes of surrounding and trapping the President's car.

Leaders of the rally said the "wave of hatred" came not only from young radicals, but also from white-collar engineers thrown out of work by cutbacks in government spending, who were also picketing Nixon.

Earl O. Hedemark, an attorney who represented several of the radical groups who planned the rally, said they "did everything in their power to prevent violence."

Hedemark said the rally organizers had intended to keep it verbal and non-violent.

"The big shock and surprise to the protest group was the intensity of feeling which sprang from the white-collar guys," Hedemark said. "There was a true merger and this sudden wave of anger seemed to be shared by everyone."

At San Clemente Friday, Nixon called the demonstrators

SUPERIOR COURT

Broderick Takes Judgeship Oath

By MARY LEYDECKER

Henry J. Broderick, 43-year-old attorney who lives in Tiburon, was sworn in yesterday as a Marin Superior Court judge, filling the vacancy left by the death of Judge Harold J. Haley.

The ceremony took place in a Hall of Justice courtroom filled to overflowing with about 150 persons, including family friends, attorneys and plain-clothes officers. The new judge, the first to take office in the new Hall of Justice, was sworn in by Judge E. Warren McGuire.

He was appointed in September to fill the vacancy left when Judge Haley was killed in a shoot-out at the Hall of Justice on Aug. 7.

Broderick, who left a flourishing San Francisco law practice to assume the bench, has long been active in Republican politics.

He has close connections to the Reagan administration through Marinites who won top jobs in Sacramento.

A pleasant man who smiles often and is known to have been something of a "peacemaker" in political circles, Broderick nonetheless holds firm views.

"I'm not afraid to draw lines," he told the Independent-Journal when asked about how he viewed the role of a judge.

"Everyone has to live within the limits of discipline and law is discipline," he added. He explained, however, that he did not mean the law should be applied in a vindictive sense.

As to violence, Broderick said, "I know the answer lies in law." He allowed, however, that

Arson Probers Seek Pair's Identification

I-J Special Report

SAN JOSE — Arson investigators today sought the identity of two men seen near a small fire at the rear of the Garden City Transportation Co. warehouse shortly before the entire building was engulfed in flame.

The three-alarm fire early yesterday destroyed over a million pounds of newsprint and several truck cabs and trailers. The company has been plagued by pickets and vandalism for doing business with the Independent-Journal, struck Jan. 7 by San Francisco Typographical Union 21.

The company's operations manager yesterday said he believed the $500,000 fire was set because newsprint bound for the I-J was stored in the warehouse.

The San Jose Fire Department said today a witness saw two men standing around a small fire at the rear of the building minutes before the first alarm was reported at about 3:30 a.m.

Investigators have ruled out the possibility the men were warming their hands and the fire accidently spread, a fire department spokesman said, adding, "We believe they deliberatley spread it."

I-J publisher Wishard A. Brown announced yesterday a $5,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the arsonists.

A similar reward was paid by the I-J in August to an anonymous informant credited by San Francisco police with providing information used to solve the Allan W. Daly murder case.

Daly, an I-J employee, was fatally shot in his San Francisco home July 4. Two San Bruno youths have been sentenced to long term commitment with the California Youth Authority and a San Bruno member of a union affiliated with the typographical union is awaiting trial on a murder charge in San Francisco.

The Witches, Hobgoblins Out Tonight

Unless bad weather stops them, Marin's spooks, witches and hobgoblins will be out in force tonight for Halloween trick-or-treating.

As usual, many extra police will be around, watching to see that fun doesn't turn into malicious mischief or vandalism. Every city in Marin County and the sheriff's department will have more than the usual number of men on duty.

San Rafael Police Chief Joseph J. Brusatori issued an appeal for parents to insure that their little spooks don't come to grief.

If the child's costume is dark, make srre he or she carries a flashlight, or perhaps a battery-powered Jack-O-Lantern, he suggested. Motorists should be extra careful to watch for children darting into the streets at dark, the chief added.

He suggested that parents convoy the youngsters on their rounds, recalling recent years when children were given poisoned candy or sweets containing dangerous objects.

Each of Souther Sonoma's police departments said it will have all available men on patrol tonight.

Early weather forecasts hinted the weather would be fine for the spooky parade.

Fresno Driver Dies In Accident On San Francisco Span Approach

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A Fresno man was fatally injured and two other persons hurt in a two-car crash on the San Francisco approach to the Golden Gate Bridge yesterday.

The accident, at 4:45 p.m., occurred only a short distance from the site of an accident that took 10 lives July 11.

Pronounced dead at Letterman General Hospital was Teddy B. Neel, 24.

Neel was a passenger in a vehicle driven by Anthony M. Olson, 22, of 7060 Redwood Highway, Novato. Olson remained at Letterman today with severe internal injuries, but no report on his condition was given.

Another passenger in the automobile, Delvin E. Ressel, 27, of 1313 Leafwood Drive, Novato, was reported in satisfactory condition today with head and abdominal injuries at San Francisco General Hospital.

The California Highway Patrol said Olson's vehicle was northbound on Doyle Drive heading toward the Golden Gate Bridge when it collided with a van driven by Charles J. Snow, 54, of San Francisco.

Witnesses said Snow was southbound on a connector road between Park Presidio Boulevard and Doyle Drive. As he turned into the southbound lanes of Doyle Drive, witnesses said, he hit a curb, crossed the southbound lanes and collided with Olson's car.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

To Jury Monday

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The Brodnik murder case is expected to go to the jury Monday as the prosecution ended its final argument by saying evidence presented over the past four months has proved the six Latin American youths "are guilty as charged."

Assistant District Attorney Thomas Norman Friday asked the jury of seven women and five men to find the youths guilty of first-degree murder.

The youths are on trial for the shooting death last year of patrolman Joseph Brodnik during a Mission District burglary investigation. If found guilty, they could be sent to the San Quentin gas chamber.

Pintos Recalled

DEARBORN, Mich. (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. has announced the recall of 80 per cent of its new subcompact Pintos sold with standard 1,600-cubic-centimeter engines because of accelerator linkage problem.

The 26,000 Pintos recalled involve more than 36 per cent of the 73,350 subcompacts produced so far. Those recalled involved early production models and the company said the problem was corrected on the production line in early October.

No Kidnap Clues

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (UPI)—Police said today they still have found no trace of kidnapped Brazilian consul Aloysio Dias Gomide, who has been held hostage by Tupamaro terrorists exactly three months.

Gomide, 41, was kidnapped July 31, one week before the abduction of Claude L. Fly, a 65-year-old American farm consultant.

The terrorists released photographs this week of Fly in captivity playing cards and dice with his captors. But there has been no word of Gomide's fate or condition in more than 10 days.

Optimistic Outlook

Gerald C. Smith, head of the U.S. delegation to Monday's opening of the third round in the U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT), said Friday he was "hopeful the negotiations here will be marked by further progress."

The Soviet delegation, led by Vladimir Semenov, was expected Sunday.

Order Restored

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—Police restored an uneasy peace in two Northern Irish cities today following a new outbreak of street fighting and bombing.

Sixteen persons, including 10 soldiers, were injured during the rioting in Belfast and Londonderry. One man was shot in the leg by a British soldier.

13 Train Deaths

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI)—At least 13 Africans were killed and 95 injured today when a loaded passenger train plowed into the rear of another in Soweto township during the morning rush hour.

Outlaws Souvenirs

PARIS (UPI) — The Paris police perfect outlawed the sale of Nazi war souvenirs in the flea markets of Paris "because these souvenirs recalling the brutality and atrocities of the Nazi regime are of a nature to stir up some troubles of the public order."

Thieu Rejects Red Coalition

SAIGON (UPI) —President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam rejected today any form of coalition government with the Communists, but he offered to enter secret negotiations to end the conflict.

The graying chief executive delivered his "State of the Union" address to a joint session of the senate and national assembly at the opening of the new legislative session. The address was delivered in the filled to overflowing senate chamber, located in the old French chamber of commerce along Saigon's waterfront.

Thieu called 1969 "the year of decisive victory" in his country's 13-year struggle with the Communists and said that in 1970 "the fighting is as though it has ded out."

He warned his countrymen against yielding to "Macchiavellian tricks" which would eventually lead to a Communist takeover and said: "I will never enter into a coalition with the Communists."

Although the speech was tough and uncompromising and without any of his previous references of possible Communist participation in elections following any peace settlement, Thieu said "the road to peace negotiations is still open."

"We keep intact our good intentions to discuss with the other side any matter, military as well as political, either at the bilateral peace talks, or through any form or secret negotiations," he said.

Thieu also disavowed any intention of maintaining any permanent military presence in Cambodian territory.

"The Republic of South Vietnam does not advocate the maintenance of armed forces in Cambodian territory. On the contrary, we are only helping the people, the government and the army of a friendly nation during their first difficult moments to enable them to be ready to fight against our common enemy, the Communists aggressors, within the spirit of cooperation between two friendly nations and people, sharing mutual respect for each other."

The disavowal apparently was aimed at alleviating Cambodian fears that South Vietnam intends to make permanent its occupation of such areas as the "Parrot's Beak," 35 miles northwest of Saigon.

Chile's President Selects Peking Backer For Cabinet

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI)—President-elect Salvador Allende Friday named three Communists and a pro-Peking Socialist to key posts in his 12-man cabinet.

Allende will be inaugurated Tuesday as the first freely elected Marxist president in the Western Hemisphere.

His cabinet announced Friday gave the communists control of mining, the treasury and public works and assigned the Foreign Ministry to Clodomiro Almeyda, 47, an anti-American independent Marxist who has consistently supported the Chinese policy of violent revolution as opposed to the Russian idea of peaceful infiltration.

Communists in Allende's cabinet were Americo Zorrilla, treasury minister; Pascual Barraza, public works minister; and Jose Oyarce, labor minister. Allende also assigned the ministry of economy to Pedro Vuskovic, an independent Marxist-Leninist. Other cabinet posts were distributed among the various left wing parties participating in Allende's Popular Unity coalition.

Almeyda has been a self-proclaimed anti-American since his student days.

After his inauguration, Allende will face the opposition of outgoing President Eduardo Frei, still the most popular political figure in Chile.

Frei, 59, who was forbidden by law to succeed himself, said in a farewell address to the nation Friday night that he will remain politically active after turning his office over to Allende in Tuesday's ceremony.

Police State Idea Booted By Mitchell

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Attorney General John N. Mitchell will recommend a larger involvement by the federal government to cope with bombers and attacks against police but opposes "absolutely" creation of a federal police force.

Mitchell told reporters Friday after a four-hour meeting with police authorities from 13 cities and states he would ask for legislation that would allow the use of federal agencies and intelligence gathering facilities to attack the problems. He said the creation of a federal police force was not under consideration.

The law he would propose would coordinate and use "all intelligence available to the federal government in the department of justice and outside it," Mitchell said. He did not rule out the use of the Secret Service or military intelligence.

The attorney general said demonstrators who stoned President Nixon's car at San Jose, Calif., Thursday night were "as much a part of the anarchistic, nihilistic group" as those who bomb buildings and attack police.

Mitchell said he doubted the attack would produce a surge of sympathy votes for the Republicans in Tuesday's voting.

"There has been so much of this type of activity that the impact set in long before yesterday," Mitchell said.

Police officials who met with him Friday were unanimous in their support of the federal legislation, Mitchell said.

There is no need for a law in the United States similar to the war emergencies act under which Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau suspended many civil liberties in response to the kidnapping of two officials in Canada, Mitchell said.

Murphy Calls San Jose Incident 'Revolutionary'

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Republican Sen. George Murphy said Friday that the violence President Nixon faced in San Jose is part of "a revolutionary movement to destroy this nation."

But Democratic gubernatorial nominee Jess Unruh suggests that Republicans may have inspired the violence. "Whenever the Republicans are in trouble, the violence appears to come out," Unruh told a news conference in Oakland.

The President's car was pelted with rocks Thursday night in San Jose after Nixon appeared at a rally to boost the re-election drive of Murphy.

Murphy, talking to newsmen in Anaheim, said the demonstration "obviously was a preplanned attack led by experts. We can no longer put this off as some childish prank or student complaint. This now must be recognized for exactly what it is—a revolutionary movement to destroy this nation."

In reply to a reporter's question, Murphy said he did not hold his Democratic opponent, Rep. John V. Tunney, nor the Democratic Party responsible for the riot.

Unruh said it seemed "awfully strange" that violence came the same day Gov. Ronald Reagan ordered national guardsmen to protect major candidates.

He said the violence "doesn't do anything but help the people they (the demonstrators) say they oppose."

In other campaign developments:

— Reagan denounced the crowd that threw rocks at Nixon's car as "hate-filled" and "violent" mob. Speaking to the Commonwealth Club in San Francisco, Reagan said if "they (the crowd) could get a totally defenseless unarmed individual they probably would have torn him to pieces. In the face of any resistance, any force, they're cowards."

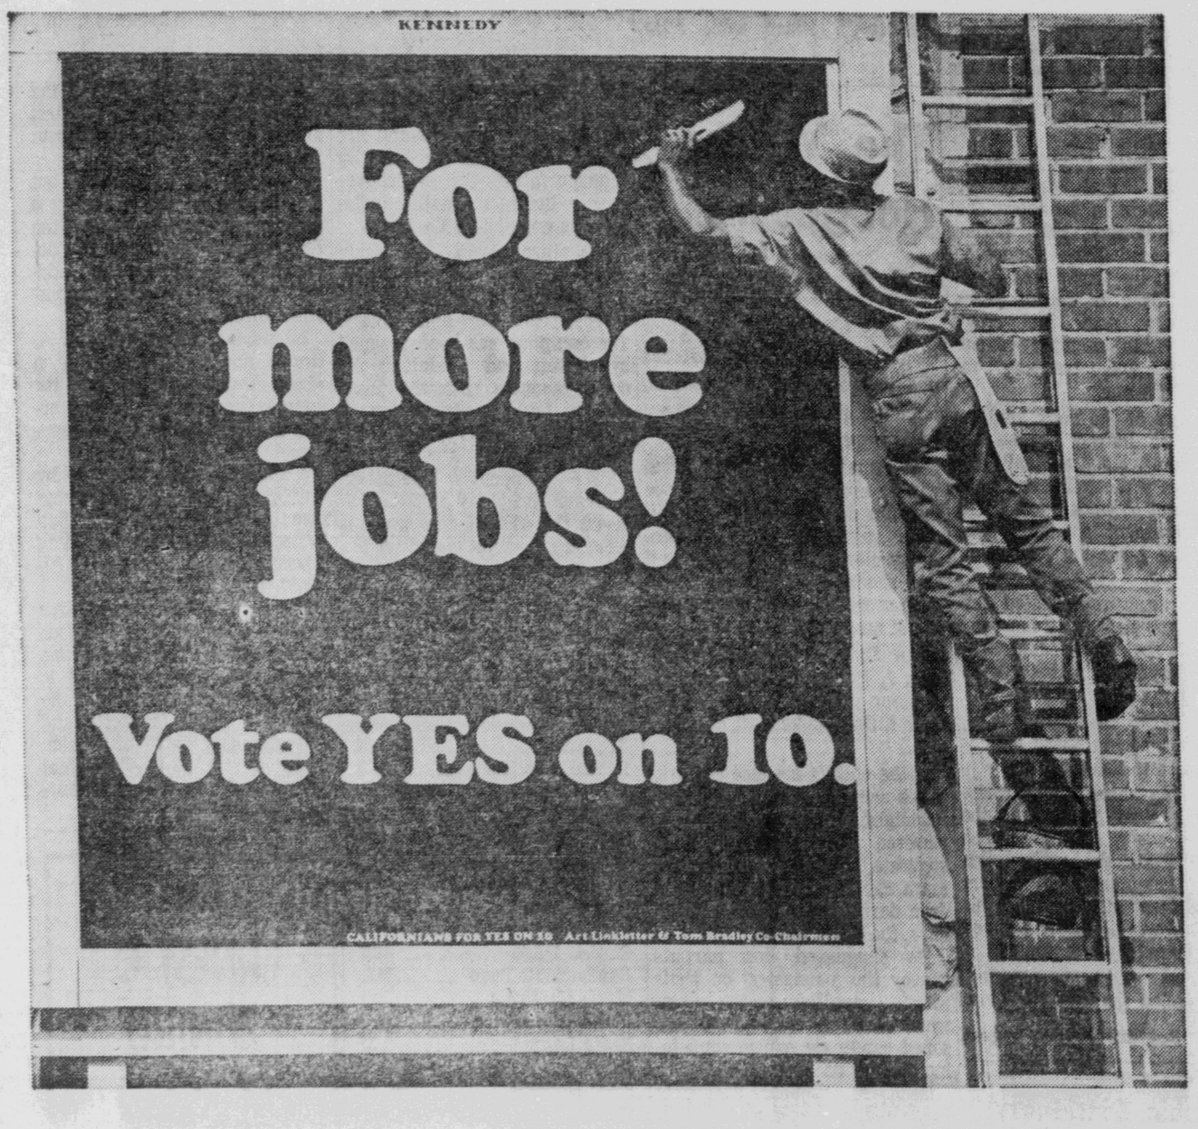

—Tunney called on Murphy to repudiate a newspaper advertisement depicting him as a friend of "radicals and extremists." "This recurrence of McCarthyism is designed not only to defeat a candidate but to destroy his personal character," Tunney told a group of Chico State college students. He said similar versions of the ad featuring the names of other congressmen and senators appeared in other states.

—Dr. Max Rafferty, seeking re-election as state superintendent of public instruction, said his opponent, Wilson Riles, "is so desperate to claim qualifications, he even claimed chairmanship of a presidential commission which never existed." Rafferty said he was referring to broadcast political spots which say Riles is "chairman of President Nixon's task force on urban affairs." But Rafferty said the HEW secretary, not the president, selected the members of the commission and Riles was only a member.

KENNEDY

If you want more jobs for California, you're for Proposition 10!

Proposition 10 will get our economy going again by making more money available for new homes and apartments, shopping centers and office buildings. And that means more jobs!

How will Proposition 10 do this?

By doing away with California's out-of-date interest laws on large business loans (the kind of loans vital to the construction industry)—and opening them up to free competition. New York passed a law like Proposition 10 way back in 1850. That's one reason why California will this year be deprived of ¾ of a billion dollars which will go to help New York and 44 other states with more modern laws.

Proposition 10 will change all this without costing you a penny or changing the interest you pay in any way. (In fact, it might even lower it in the long run.)

That's why Proposition 10 was passed unanimously by the State Legislature and signed by Governor Reagan. Former Governor Pat Brown supports it. So do business and labor unions. But their endorsements can't make it law without your YES.

So help them by voting YES November 3. You'll be doing a good job for a lot of good people.

PRACTICING SKILL — Ricky Low, 13, demonstrates the technique which enabled him to become the first boy to win the national hula hoop contest. The Portland, Ore., eighth grader also excels in other departments.

A REAL WINNER

Hula Hoop Champ Is Quite A Lad

By ROBERTA ULRICH

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)— Ricky Low is a real winner.

Not only is the 13-year-old Portland eighth grader the first boy ever to win the national hula hoop contest but he has won two blue ribbons in statewide piano contests and brings home almost straight A grades.

Previous hula hoop winners have been girls. Ricky doesn't offer any pat explanations for his own contest win in Hollywood in August, but says he picked up a lot of ideas along the way in local, state and regional competition, adding to his repertoire as he went.

He won the Oregon state contest two years ago when he first entered and was the state runnerup last year.

By the time he competed in the national finals he was able to keep four hoops going at once. His winning routine involved three hoops manipulated by foot and toe.

The champion can't defend his title under contest rules but Ricky still practices half an hour to an hour a day. You never know when a skill may be challenged.

He spends more time on his piano and school studies, however. Until recently he was an avid hamster breeder but now has given all 20 of them away, leaving his supply of pets at one gerbil and one basset hound.

Ricky was raising the hamsters to sell but the pet shop which provided a market for him closed and he, too, went out of business.

Ricky's father, Richard D. Low, owns a grocery store and Ricky wants to be a store owner when he grows up. "I'd like to own a chain of pet stores," Ricky told a reporter. As he sees it, his favorite subjects in school, "math and science," will come in handy when that day comes. He'll save his $1,000 savings bond hula hoop first prize for college.

Hula hooping isn't Ricky's only sport. He took up skiing last winter and hopes to continue this year. He skis on nearby Mt. Hood. He also enjoys ocean fishing with his family.

The Lows have an older son, Terry, who is scheduled to arrive home from Army service in Vietnam by Thanksgiving, and a sister, Joni, who is a senior at Washington High School here.

Ricky's parents are proud of their son although Mrs. Low admits, "I don't want him to enter (the hula hoop competition). I don't really like that kind of contest for youngsters but we told Ricky if that's what he wanted to do we were behind him." She and Joni accompanied him to the national contest and on subsequent trips to Las Vegas and New York.

Both parents say Ricky's big win has made little difference in him. He's still getting those A's.

Co-Ed Was Classmate Of Julie's

NEW YORK (UPI) —An autopsy Friday showed that Patrice Leary, a 22-year-old teacher who had been a classmate of Mrs. Julie Nixon Eisenhower, died of strangulation.

Her beaten and stabbed body was found Thursday by a roommate in their apartment on Manhattans' West Side near a park frequented by drug addicts.

Police were searching for a bushy-haired man in his early 20s, about five feet, 11 inches tall and 170 pounds. Witnesses saw a man of such a description enter the apartment building shortly after Miss Leary returned home from the Brearley School, where Caroline Kennedy is an eighth grader.

Doctors were given the description of the suspect since the girl had clawed her attacker and police believed he would need medical attention.

Miss Leary, who was in the class of 1970 with President Nixon's daughter at Smith College, had come from her hometown of Okoboji, Iowa, last month to take the teaching job.

Zodiac's Halloween Greeting To Reporter

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The mad killer calling himself Zodiac has sent a ghoulish Halloween card which threatens the life of a veteran crime reporter who has written of his slayings.

Paul Avery of the San Francisco Chronicle Friday revealed that he had received the message from Zodiac, who claims to have slain at least 13 persons. Police believe he has taken five lives.

"I'm not frightened, but I think Zodiac is," said Avery, who refused police protection.

"Peek-a-boo — you are doomed" was the message neatly printed in white artists' ink on a children's greeting card, signed "from your secret pal."

Avery said the number 14 was also written on the card but that "police didn't know if that means he is boasting of 14 victims or that I'm next."

The message also contained the words "paradise slaves" and "by fire, by gun and by rope."

Avery said there were other words but he could not disclose them at this time.

The card, addressed to "Paul Averly," arrived at the Chronicle Wednesday morning in a plain white envelope. The postmark showed it had been dropped into a San Francisco mailbox Tuesday afternoon. The card immediately was turned over to homocide detectives, who forwarded it to the State Bureau of Criminal Identification and investigation in Sacramento.

State handwriting expert Sherwood Morrill confirmed the death threat was indeed the work of Zodiac. He based the conclusion on a comparison with the writing on previous letters the boastful killer has sent the Chronicle over the past years.

He marks his notes with a crossed circle that resembles the sight of a rifle.

The last killing police credit to Zodiac was the shooting of San Francisco cabbie Paul Stine in October of 1969. The killer mailed a piece of the victim's shirt to police.

"Since the Stine slaying Zodiac has not identified anyone he has killed. He just boosts the number," Avery said.

He suggested Zodiac "came close to being caught the night of the Stine slaying and since then he's just been too scared to act."

Other victims police say Zodiac killed were teen-agers David Faraday and Betty Lou Jensen on Dec. 20, 1968, near Vallejo at the north end of San Francisco Bay; waitress Darleen Ferrin, July 5, 1969, also near Vallejo, and co-ed Cecelia Ann Shepard at nearby Lake Berryessa, Sept. 27, 1969.

Watson Is Removed On Insanity Ruling

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The man accused of actually killing six of the seven Tate-LaBianca murder victims has been adjudged insane and unable to stand trial because he is "turning into a vegetable."

Superior Court Judge George M. Dell ordered the suspect, Charles D. (Tex) Watson, 24, removed to a mental hospital Friday following a sanity hearing.

Dell read excerpts from reports by doctors and psychiatrists which said that Watson was turning into a vegetable and was in imminent danger of death.

Dr. Seymour Pollack's report said Watson had a definite suicide potential and had dropped in weight from his normal 160-pounds to less than 110 pounds since being extradited from Texas last Sept. 11. Pollack said Watson had to be spoon-fed.

Now, Pollack's report said, Watson was being fed by a tube from his mouth into his stomach and there was a danger he might "expire of malnutrition."

One doctor's report said Watson "stared off in space and giggled and smiled."

"He remains mute and nonverbal," it said. "At times he appears to understand and tears well up in his eyes."

A report by court-appointed psychiatrist, Dr. Marcus Crahan, said Watson "is rapidly reverting to a [illegible] state . . . which could be [illegible] fatal."

Pollock and Dr. George Y.Abe said Watson's condition was a severe psychotic depression and-or catatonic-type schizophrenic reaction.

Dell said should Watson recover, the case against him would be reinstated.

Watson, a former Texas high school football star named by defendant Susan Atkins in grand jury testimony as the man who actually carried out most of the knife and gun killings at the homes of actress Sharon Tate and Leno LaBianca, was committed to the Atascadero State Hospital. Dell ordered that every effort be made to save his life.

The sanity hearing for Watson was conducted in a courtroom just down the corridor from where the state is winding up its 21-week-old case against Charles Manson and his three female co-defendants in the killings.

The attorneys for Manson and his co-defendants tried unsuccessfully Friday to keep a key prosecution witness from testifying on the grounds she was not mentally competent to repeat accurately an alleged conversation with defendant Leslie Van Houten, 19.

However, Superior Court Judge Charles H. Older ruled that Diane Lake, 17, was competent and she is expected to take the stand Monday. The prosecution will rest its case when she concludes her testimony.

Miss Lake, who spent two years with the Manson "Family," will be called to relate conversations she had with Miss Van Houten in which the girl allegedly admitted she took part in the killing of grocer Leno LaBianca and his wife the night after the Tate slayings last year.

No Write-In Vote Will Be Counted Tuesday

No write-in votes will be counted in Tuesday's election, county elections officer Peter C. Meyer said yesterday.

State law says that write-in candidates' votes will be counted only if the candidate has filed a declaration with each county clerk where he wants his write-in votes to be counted. He also has to pay the regular filing fee for that office.

Both the filing and the fee were due five days before the election, and none was received by Thursday's deadline, Meyer reported.

FIRE GUTS HOMESTEAD VALLEY HOME

Flames leap from the top story of the home of Paul A. Mitchell at 901 Vernal Way, Homestead Valley. The blaze gutted the home shortly after 9 a.m. today, causing about $25,000 damage. A clothes dryer left running in the garage was believed responsible for the fire. There was no one home at the time of the blaze. Fireman Donald Irving sufferd a minor neck burn when hit by a flaming piece of debris. The blaze was contained within an hour. (Photo by David Irving)

Health Aide Clears Up Candy Scare

"Candy bars being sold in Marin are not contaminated to the best of our knowledge," Marin's chief of environmental health said today.

William Desmond said he received word yesterday from Raymond Lamperti, chief inspector of the San Francisco office of the State Food and Drug Administration, that all contaminated O'Henry Co. bars have been recalled.

In addition, rodent hairs were found in some candy boxes produced by the Broadway Candy Corp. of Chicago but the packages were recalled before the candy reached retailers, said Desmond.

Desmond said he was quite sure that candy in Marin is safe. "However, if you have an O'Henry bar and if you have any qualms about them, my advice would be take it back to the retail store, and I'm sure the money will be refunded," Desmond said.

Desmond said he was told by Lamperti that salmonella contamination of O'Henry bars was detected on Sept. 1, and all of the suspected candy bars were removed.

Children Will Join UNICEF

Tiburon and Belvedere children will take part in the Halloween "Trick or Treat for UNICEF" march tonight, according to Mrs. E. R. Schleiger, local chairman.

Nearly 500 youngsters in the annual Halloween parade will carry orange UNICEF cartons to collect coins for the world's needy children through the United Nations Children's fund.

Last year about $650 was collected on the Tiburon peninsula and in Belvedere, Mrs. Schleiger said.

Water District Denies Sierra Club Charges

The Marin Municipal Water District has denied a charge by the San Francisco Bay chapter of the Sierra Club that passage of the district's $11.5 million bond issue will jeopardize the proposed Point Reyes National Seashore.

A Sierra Club publication and an advertisement in yesterday's Independent-Journal recommended a no vote against Measure H on Tuesday's ballot on the grounds the bonds would add to the water supply for West Marin, "thereby encouraging development there and endangering the full acquisition of Point Reyes National Seashore."

A letter to the Sierra Club from William R. Seeger, general manager of the water district, explained that $7.5 million asked for in the bond issue will finance "much needed improvements to the existing system."

The remaining $4 million, Seeger said, will finance a "connecting link" between the North Marin Water District and the Marin municipal district to deliver water into the Marin municipal district.

"This additional supply will be used within the area served by the MMWD, and not in West Marin," Seeger said.

He denied the Sierra Club's charge that there is an agreement between the two water districts for exchanging water to permit development in West Marin.

Seeger said consideration has been given to a proposal to release a small amount of water from Nicasio Dan "to augment seasonal deficiencies in the supply for existing consumers in Point Reyes Station and Inverness."

But "this could hardly be considered as a benefit to 'land developers with large holdings in West Marin,' as indicated in your article," Seeger's letter said.

The stop in Phoenix was the first of a final, four-state campaign and followed a rally in Anaheim, Calif., Friday night in which Nixon termed the Tuesday election "the most important and decisive senate election in the 190-year history of the country."

Referring to such radicals as those who attacked his automobile during an appearance in Northern California Thursday night, Nixon said it was "time to draw the line" against both them and their congressional apologists.

there probably has been a problem in communication, too. "The courts haven't always communicated well," he added.

The courts are not the place to solve social problems in the new judge's view. "The Warren court tried to solve social problems and moved into the legislative field. This is not their business," he said.

Although Judge Broderick thinks elections for judgeships are not the best way to fill the posts, he thinks judges should be subject to recall.

"Intelligence and intergrity" were the two qualities deemed by him to be essential for a good judge.

Why did he quit his lucrative law practice which he had built since 1954 to take the judge's post?

"I felt the need to participate in public affairs," Broderick said, adding he didn't want this to sound immodest.

A native of San Francisco, Broderick was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley and from Stanford Law Sschool. He served in the Army's judge advocate general office before entering private practice.

His firm specialized in the business field and many of his cases involved the construction industry. "I soon discovered I had no feeling for criminal defense," he said, explaining he has had little criminal law experience.

Broderick is a former president of the Marin Republican Council, as well as legal counsel to the Marin County Republican Central Committee.

ly if I wanted to see my mother alive."

Understandably upset and caught without any cash or even a blank check on a Friday night, Mrs. Hansen went to Marin Fruit hoping Willie could give her a check blank, one of the myriad small services Willie supplied his customers.

"I'll just never forget what happened," Mrs. Hansen said. "I told Willie what had happened and he reached into the till and handed me $300 in cash and said: 'Get going.' He insisted I take the money right then," she continued with emotion, "and I had the hardest time paying him back; he didn't want to take it. "There's no finer man in this world," Mrs. Hansen said.

According to his admirers - and they are legion - Willie Yee has always been ready to help - not just in large emergencies, but in small crises too. During the Depression, commuters on their way to the Sausalito - San Francisco ferry who found themselves short of cash, could always shop at Marin Fruit for the necessary fare, according to George Chapman.

And during the trying Depression days when all the banks were closed, Willie was the "town banker," lending cash to people who weren't sure - in light of the bank failure - that they had any money left.

"Willie was the only businessman who would cash checks during that time; he cashed them until the banks reopened," remembers Mrs. John Koenig, who added: "And he didn't get it all back either."

Mrs. Koenig also recalls that Willie, who at the time went to market every day in San Francisco, would bring back fruits and vegetables for a rival storekeeper, an elderly Chinese man, who had "a tiny cubbyhole of a market," right next door to Marin Fruit.

And when World War II, with its problems of shortages and rationing, descended on the Sausalito business community, Willie was still always ready to give a hand a friend or acquaintence.

Just before rationing went into effect, a government order went out saying that - because of a shortage of most goods stores could only purchase about 60 per cent of the wholesale items they had bought the previous year. Well-established businesses felt the pinch, but for new firms, in the process of building up a clientele, the regulations often spelled economic diasaster.

"We wouldn't have been able to stay in business without Willie's assistance," said Mrs. Young - who with her husband operated the Princess Market in those days. Willie, who had been in business a long time and built up a sizeable stock, gave the Youngs some of the stock he was entitled to so they could have enough merchandise to keep going.

Later, when gas rationing went into effect, Willie, when he went to market in San Francisco, would bring items back for the Youngs and his fellow shopkeepers, charging them only for the goods and the bridge toll.

Other friends and satisfied customers mentioned numerous acts of kindness, such as remembering policemen and firemen with gifts at Christmas and helping poor families. One woman, in the hospital for a long time after an auto accident, remarked that the Yee family came often to visit her.

If customers forget to order some milk - for example - a mere mention of the forgotten item will result in one of the Yee sons bringing the milk to them, after they have finished their house-to-house deliveries.

Willie's customers have tried to repay him in a small way, by shopping at his store at 605 Bridgeway and ignoring the supermarkets, even if they offer ample parking and a larger selection.

Mrs. Miller, a widow, would like to move out of Sausalito to a smaller, more convenient house. But, she said, she does not want to have to shop anywhere but Marin Fruit and Grocery and so she stays. Another lady "couldn't shop anywhere else if my life depended on it" and a third mentioned she had once bought a carton of cigarettes elsewhere on a rare occasion when Willie's shop was closed and "my conscience bothered me for months."

And Mrs. Raymond Barker, who now lives in the Tamalpais Senior Citizens Home in Corte Madera, still drives into Sausalito, braving the traffic, to shop at Willie's market.

"It's really not surprising people stay with Willie," one woman commented. "At one time or another, he's probably helped most of us and, besides, where else could a person get the kind of service Willie and his family provides?"

Governor Reagan tried to cut your property taxes anywhere from 25 to 40 percent.

But some politicians in the State Senate said "No" to him -and to you.

This year Governor Reagan tried to get the Legislature to adopt his "fair share" tax relief program.

The Governor wanted to —reduce your property taxes anywhere from 25 to 40 percent (27% on a $20,000 home; 25% on a $20,000 home, etc.)

—give renters a $50.00 annual State income tax reduction

—supply additional State money to local school districts to offset the cost of inflation.

—shift about $190 million in annual welfare and Medi-Cal costs from the counties to the State (taking some more pressure off of local property taxes)

—clamp a lid on local property tax rates

—adopt withholding and give you a 35% reduction on your 1970 State income taxes —reduce the discriminatory inventory tax —increase the bank and corporations tax

—reduce the oil depletion allowance

—increase the sales tax by one-cent on non-essentials (but no tax on food, drugs, shelter or medical expenses) —increase the state income tax at the higher levels ($32,000 and up), and —close the tax loopholes so that certain citizens and corporations paid at least a minimum income tax.

All that was in the Governor's tax relief program. 93 out of 119 legislators voted for it—78 percent. But a small band of politicians in the State Senate blocked the bill. It lost by 1 vote.

When you get your property tax bill this year, remember—it could have been cut. It could have been anywhere from 25 to 40 percent less. If Governor Reagan had had his way.

Governor Reagan has vowed that tax relief will be the first order of business next year. You can help him make sure it is.

On November 3rd, vote for Governor Reagan—and vote for those candidates who will support him in his fight for tax relief. Give him a Team for the Seventies . . . and watch him really get things done!

Keep California moving ahead in the '70s.

Re-elect Governor Reagan.

INFLATION ISSUE

Treasury Aide Tags Democrats

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The No. 2 man in the Treasury Department today delivered a pre-election counterattack against the critics of Nixon administration economic policies, saying inflation was "the legacy of preceding Democratic administrations."

Treasury Undersecretary Charles E. Walker said Democratic and labor critics had tried to convince voters that the economy was "going to hell in a handbasket" with the Republicans to blame. The truth, he said, was that the Nixon administration was beginning to cure the problems of the Johnson administration.

"A badly overheated economy has been cooled, inflation is being brought under control, financial markets are operating efficiently, a housing boom is in prospect and the road back toward full employment is clearly charted," Walker said.

"It is a record on which we are proud to run."

The advance text of Walker's speech to a meeting of bankers at Georgetown University was given to newsmen a day ahead of time with a covering letter by Treasury Secretary David M. Kennedy that made it clear Walker's remarks had been carefully planned and had the full backing of President Nixon.

"The enclosed speech is especially pertinent at this time," said Kennedy's letter. "I am sending the full text to you because it is my feeling that it sets out the straight facts about the economy."

Cover letters from cabinet officials concerning government news releases are rare. Newsmen could not recall Kennedy ever using the tactic.

Numerous high Democratic and labor leaders have hammered away at the administration's economic policies, pointing to high unemployment —5.5 percent in the last report — and high cost of living. The attack has been led by AFL-CIO President George Meany, House Speaker John W. McCormack and a raft of Democratic Senate candidates.

But Walker said Republicans are not responsible for current economic problems.

"When President Nixon assumed office in January, 1969, he inherited one of the most intractable economic problems in modern times —inflation and inflationary expectations had truly captured the American economy," Walker said.

"Who created this dangerous situation? Not Richard Nixon and his economic team, not a Republican Congress. Not by a long shot.

"This economic mess was the legacy of preceding Democratic administrations advised either formally or informally by those same Democratic economists who have been firing the recent salvos at the Nixon policies."

Walker said these economists are the same ones who advised President Johnson the nation could afford guns and butter, and a "great society" at the same time, thus "assuring that the economy would fall prey to the ravages of deep and accelerating inflation."

Pickets At Terminal Called Off

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— San Francisco Teamsters Local 85 pulled its pickets off the Howard Terminal in Oakland Friday, but maintained lines on six San Francisco docks protesting a dispute involving replacement of two members.

The dispute came after two Local 85 members were replaced by Longshoremen after the Jones Stevedoring Co. bought Matson's stevedoring operation, according to Teamsters spokesman Tim Richardson.

The Teamster picket line in Oakland was withdrawn after the Jones company ended its work on the dock there.

Teamster pickets have stopped cargo movement from the six San Francisco piers since Tuesday although members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Local 10 stayed on the job. The Pacific Maritime Association has filed an unfair labor charge with the National Labor Relations Board.

Angela Files Suit Over Her Solitary Confinement

NEW YORK (UPI)—BLACK Marxist Angela Davis sued Friday to get out of solitary confinement, contending her constitutional rights were violated.

The suit, filed on her behalf by the National Conference of Black Lawyers, names New York Mayor John V. Lindsay, Corrections Commissioneer George McGrath and other city officials. It also asks for $250,000 in damages.

Federal Judge Walter R. Mansfield postponed a hearing until Monday.

Miss Davis, a former University of California at Los Angeles instructor and an avowed Communist, is accused of buying the weapons used in a courthouse shoot-out in San Rafael that resulted in four deaths. She was arrested here Oct. 12.

She has been kept in a special section for emotionally and psychologically disturbed prisoners in the Women's House of Detention. She began a hunger strike Oct. 24, presumably to protest her solitary confinement.

A lawyer for the city's corporation counsel said she was being kept isolated for her own protection and because she might be "a serious disruptive influence on other inmates."

A federal grand jury on Friday indicted David R. Poindexter on charges of harboring a fugitive. Poindexter was arrested with Miss Davis in a Manhattan motel. The charge has a possible penalty of five years imprisonment and $5,000 fine.

Two Arraigned On Pot Growing Charge

Mark Robert Topper and Eugenia Henriette Polos, both of Novato, were arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on charges of possessing and growing marijuana on Oct. 14.

Their case was continued to Nov. 19 for setting of a preliminary hearing.

G.M., UAW Declare Blackout On News

DETROIT (UPI) —General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers have decreed a news blackout on negotiations to end a 47-day old strike and appointed a special negotiating subcommittee to break the economic logjam.

It was the first major break in the nearly seven-week strike and raised hopes of a settlement. News blackouts in the past have indicated the beginning of serious bargaining.

The special subcommittees appointed to probe into key economic issues met for several hours Friday and meetings were anticipated through the weekend.

On Friday afternoon, J. Curtis Counts, head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, met with both sides and said that for the first time in auto negotiations history, the federal government would step into the dispute if necessary.

Both G.M. and UAW bargainers said they had not asked for federal mediation and knew of no authority of the government to step into the negotiations unless asked. Both the UAW and automakers have shunned government intervention in the past as too time-consuming.

Counts contended he flew from Washington, D.C., on his own initiative and denied there were any political implications in making the visit four days before elections.

Named to the special subcommittee to crack key strike issues were UAW President Leonard Woodcock and G.M. department co-director Irving Bluestone, who will face G.M. chief negotiator Earl Bramblett, Morris, director of labor relations, and Victor Zink, director of personnel research.

Woodcock said, "the parties have agreed that during the period that these probing sessions are under way there will be no public comment concerning the progress of these discussions."

HELEN HELP US!

Kids Who Can Talk With Their Parents Usually Listen Also

DEAR HELEN:

I read something last month in your column that I haven't seen in print for a long time: Something good about mothers and fathers.

I completely agree with "L.B., Age 13" who thinks her parents are great. There aren't many teen-agers I know who would say that.

A good relationship between the generations mean understanding on both sides, and that takes time as well as lots of love. Kids who can really talk with their folks usually listen to them too — and so their troubles don't get too big to handle.

My mother says the secret of raising teen-agers is to be neither whole friend or wholly parent, but to be a friendly parent. Following this line, she has raised a — FRIENDLY DAUGHTER

DEAR HELEN:

You asked "Where did family communication go?" (when so many young people take their troubles to columnists rather than to parents).

Perhaps I can give you one clue.

Family communication goes when one teen-ager tells another, "Don't be a square . . . Don't tell your parents anything. They're the Establishment. Spill your problems to your friends . . . They won't tell anyone over 21."

Teen friends never squeal to a parent that a friend or relative is on drugs — and just might happen to die from an overdose. "Never tell the Establishment anything." Thus, teen-agers help the dumb, drug-addicted dodo to die, maybe.

Teen friends never squeal to a parent where the runaway might be going. Thus teen-agers help the runaway into, perhaps, a life of prostitution or crime, or drifting.

It's always "Rap with friends — never parents or "pigs."

That's where our family communication went when our teen-ager began communicating with friends.

Who needs enemies with friends like these? — A PARENT WHO LOST

DEAR HELEN:

I was looking in the desk for some stationery when I came across a letter my mother had started but never mailed. Honest, I wasn't snooping, but when "Dearest Joe" popped out at me from the paper, I couldn't help reading on.

You see, Joe is our best friend, and so is his wife. Ever since Dad died, they've been like brother and sister to Mom and second parents to me.

Mom's letter to Joe wasn't sisterly. It told how guilty she felt about loving him and we were going to move away because she couldn't trust herself, and a lot more.

If she didn't send the letter, does this mean everything is blown over? I couldn't tell whether Joe felt this way about her, from what she said, and they act the same as they always did — just good friends. The letter was dated September 15, so it's over a month old.

Should I mention it to her, or forget it? — THE WORRIER

DEAR WORRIER:

Forget it. I think that letter may have been written as therapy for a lonely woman who sometimes mistakes gratitude for love. That it was never sent indicates the therapy worked. — H.

SEW SIMPLE

Advice For Beginning Sewers

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

We are a group of young married women who live in the same apartment complex with one common interest; we are beginning to sew. We're very excited about it, but it's like the blind leading the blind. We are following the instructions of a pattern, but there are other questions that seem to come up. Please try to think about beginners this week instead of more advanced sewers and answer some of our questions. If you do, we'll be advanced. My question is, "Why can't we cut our material out with pinking shears?" My mother has been sewing for years and doesn't understand why you say we shouldn't do this.

MARY W.

DEAR MARY W.,

Thanks for writing me, guess I do forget at times that I am talking a level or two above the beginners. I shall devote today's column to you, but may I tell you how happy I am that you are beginning this wonderful new adventure that will add a new dimension to your lives?

Pinking shears were formerly used to finish the seams of cottons and firm woolens after they have been stitched. If you pink your seams as you cut the garment, the fabric pulls out of shape. It will ravel out before you are finished and will have to be pinked again, and you cannot see your important notches.

Most fabrics today must be underlined and, therefore, seams should be treated together. If your fabric ravels easily, overcast the underlining and the garment fabric together. This is done most successfully by hand with very loose stitches and makes good television work for long evenings.

If you use the sewing machine for this, be sure it doesn't pull or draw the seams up which could distort the shape of the garment. The pinking shears are not satisfactory if your fabric ravels.

MRS. ANNE Stone, Wilkesboro, N.C., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"With the ballpoint needles becoming more in demand for the knits, I would like to pass on a hint I find quite useful. In order to see at a glance which needle is either in the machine or in my box of supplies, I put a dot of red nail polish near the front end of the needle at the top. Instantly, you can spot the ones you need for any given project."

DEAR EUNICE,

Please explain stay-stitching? I thought this wasn't necessary when a garment is underlined? Should we stay-stitch the garment as well as the underlining?

HELEN H.

DEAR HELEN,

Stay-stitching is most important for a beginner since many things can be pulled out of shape without being aware of it when you don't know exactly how to handle your fabric. Stay-stitching is usually done on the garment fabric only, and I usually recommend it for only the curved areas of a garment, namely the neck edge, the shoulder and the armholes. Stay-stitching is done with the regular length stitch, exactly on the 5/8 inch seamline. It doesn't do any good to stay-stitch at any other part of your seam allowance.

When you yet more advanced and sit down and work on a garment until it is completed, this extra step won't be as important. If you are tailoring a coat or suit you will also want to stay-stitch curved areas because a garment can become pulled out of shape easily when it is placed on a hanger for any period of time.

Often when a woman complains of a neckline that is too large, it is merely stretched out of shape. A neckline is almost a continuous bias edge and stabilizing this and any other area that could be stretched is most important in the finished results.

Remember, some of the steps that are necessary for beginners, will be forgotten after you have worked with fabrics and understand the importance of shaping and handling various parts of a garment. It's well worth the extra effort at this point.

THE JERRY Silverman firm comes to the rescue of women who can't stand the mini, don't like the midi and abhor hip-hugging silhouettes, ushering in the pretty dress era for spring. Give A Cheer For The Pretty Dress

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — All you women who can't stand the mini, don't like the midi and abhor hip-hugging silhouettes in dresses, let out a little cheer.

The pretty dress era is dawning for spring in the nation's garment district.

What made it official was the opening of the spring collection designed by Shannon Rodgers for the firm of Jerry Silverman.

SILVERMAN, PRESIDENT of the company that does more than $20 million a year, said he knows pretty dresses are what the women of America want.

The firm's owned by Warnaco, a fashion conglomerate that also markets girdles and bras and ski wear. Silverman said the pretty dress edict was reached after he and his colleagues crossed the country in an effort to learn what women really want.

"We talked to sales ladies, customers and managers," he said. "And this is our answer — giving them what they want."

The pretty dresses, he told buyers present, would guarantee them smashing spring sales. It had these marks: hems always covering the knee but seldom going down to midcalf, the undisputed midi length; soft skirts, some flared and some gathered; close to the body bodices and usually to the wrist sleeves; enhancement of femininity by soft silk bows at the neck.

OTHER MARKS: portrait necklines, jewelry necklines and sedate use of color; an occasional ruffle.

The daytime look featured the costume more than the suit. Jackets with these ranged from the short-cropped bolero type to full length, the latter frequently without sleeves, giving a long-vest look.

For evening, designer Rodgers advanced floor-length silk gowns with quilted skirts, some with restrained patterns of sequins to add a dash of sparkle.

These were prettiest in paintbox colored floral prints and usually had long sleeves and jewelry necklines or portrait ones. The bare-armed look seems to be as out in this collection for evening as it is for daytime.

AMONG THE few pantsuits in the collection was one with a full-length hooded cape. It was done in white and was very feminine.

You can call Silverman's firm successful. The formula is not secret, a spokesman said, adding:

"Very few houses (dress manufacturers) today make a dress for a woman to wear on the street. We do."

Most of the outfits in the collection retail in the $100 to $200 price range.

Personal Pictures

CHICAGO (UPI) —Don't be uptight about buying pictures. Buy what you like, advises the Picture and Frame Institute.

"A home is truly personal when the artwork reflects the taste of those who live in it," the Institute said.

TWO GLAD, ONE SAD — Disc jockey-turned-actor Gene Nelson and comedienne Patti Newman appear happy in each other's arms, but Skip Sommer has only a bottle to clasp, in "The Star Spangled Girl." The comedy will open next Saturday in the new Actors Playhouse of Marin at Congregation Rodef Sholom, San Rafael.

Actors Playhouse Of Marin Sets Opening

The footlights will glow for the first time next Saturday night for the new Actors Playhouse of Marin.

On the stage of the Congregation Rodef Sholom auditorium, 170 North San Pedro Road, the new troupe will open a four-weekend run of "The Star Spangled Girl," a comedy by Neil Simon.

Curtain time will be 8:30 p.m. on Saturdays and 7 p.m. on Sundays through Nov. 28. There will be no performance Nov. 29.

"Don't look for a message; 'The Star Spangled Girl' is for laughter," director Bill McCall of Greenbrae warned yesterday. McCall recently directed "Mary, Mary", "Barefoot in the Park," "Impossible Years" and "Never Too Late."

Starring in the Actors Playhouse debut will be Gene Nelson, Sausalito resident and Bay Area disc jockey; Patti Newman, known for such roles as her "Damned Yankees" performance, and Skip Sommer, Mill Valley resident and former rodeo rider turned comic performer.

Several Marin County charitable and civic groups are sponsoring benefit ticket sales for performances. The opening night will be sponsored by the St. Raphael's Church Men's Club.

Ghetto Aid Is Suspended

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The United Methidist Church has suspended its two-and one-half old program to aid financial enterprises in ghettos and among minority groups.

The church's board of missions reported at its annual meeting Friday it has stopped the direct loans and investments which have totalled $2.04 million to 36 such enterprises since early 1968.

The board's enterprise investment and loan committee has decided to re-evaluate the operation in hope of "getting the most mileage out of the available remaining resources," about $1 million, the committee said.

The committee's chief staff executive, the Rev. Dr. J. Edward Carothers of New York, said the committee is exploring avenues to generate more capacity for lending through local community resources and to decentralize the committee's process.

The Rev. Lucius Walker, New York director of the Interreligious Foundation for Community Organization IFCO told the board that shifts in popular interest from racial teisions ot pollution and ecology have caused acute financial problems for human relations ventures.

He said IFCO, established in 1967 by Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish agencies to provide a cooperative body to act as a go-between for church agencies interested in funding self-help and community organization projects in deprived communities, has experienced the same cutback in funds as many religious organizations.

To Buy Properties

NEW YORK (UPI) —McGraw-Hill, Inc. will buy the radio and television properties owned by Time-Life, Inc. for $80.1 million in cash and notes and resell the radio stations, if the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) approves the deal.

Beer Can Collection Is Booming

Two San Rafael beer distributors, who have been paying 10 cents a pound for crushed aluminum cans, have colelcted more than 15,000 pounds, and the deluge is increasing.

Golden Gate Distributing Co., distributor of Coors Beer, has gathered about 13,600 pounds since January when it began buying the reusable aluminum for Adolph Coors Co., Vern H. Silva, beer manager for Golden Gate, said.

More than 4,000 pounds have been received this month, compared with 300 in April, and almost 1,400 pounds within the past week, he said.

Anchor Distributing Co., which is collecting the metal cans for Hamm's beer, said it has purchased 1,800 pounds since its recycling program started at the end of August.

Golden Gate accepts cans each Monday and Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., while Anchor buys them from 9 a.m. to noon each Friday.

Only all aluminum cans, which are seamless, are acceptable. A pound consists of 23 cans.

Four Hurt In Three Car Crashes

A Tiburon man was hospitalized and three other persons injured in three accidents in Marin yesterday and early today, the California Highway Patrol reported.

James Huff, 19, of Hilarita Housing, was reported in satisfactory condition today at Marin General Hospital with a fractured right wrist and head cuts suffered in a one-car accident at 4:25 a.m. today.

Huff was a passenger in a car driven by Wilbert Smith, 21, of 49 Cole Drive, Marin City, who was treated at Marin General for cuts of the scalp and foot.

Details of the accident were not available.

A Woodacre youth was treated at Marin Gneral for a fractured left wrist suffered in a motorcycle accident at 6:10 p.m. yesterday.

The highway patrol said a motorcycle driven by William F. Everett, 17, of 25 Fire Road, spilled on wet pavement when Everett attempted to make a u-turn at the intersection of Railroad Avenue and Carson Road.

Jeffery K. Grinnell, 19, of 1661 Mar West Street, Tiburon, was treated at Marin General for a fractured nose and facial cuts following a one-car accident on North San Pedro Road.

Grinnell was a passenger in a car driven by Robert J. Keller, 19, of 699 Hilary Drive, Tiburon, which went off the road on a curve at about 10 p.m. yesterday, the patrol said. No other details of the accident were available.

Woman Injures Hip In Accident

CANDIDATES' NIGHT

Redevelopment, Education Major Concerns At Marin City Round

The subjects of redevelopment and education were uppermost in the minds of Marin City residents last night at a candidates' program which drew contestants for the state Senate, Assembly and Congress to the community.

A group of small, but vocal, residents of Marin City attended the meeting, addressing sharply worded questions to the candidates.

Most of the heated questions about why there is no shopping center, no school and little housing in Marin City were aimed at the state Senate candidates, Republican Peter H. Behr, Democrat Michael R. Peevey and Anne Smart of the American Independent Party.

Behr attacked the Tamalpais High School District for holding an undeveloped parcel in the center of the community and said he would favor low interest loans backed by the state to promote building.

"Unless this happens at the state level, the prospect of your getting decent building starts in Marin City is minimal," he said.

Land is needed to build on first, a woman said, and Behr answered, "I think the Tam District should either admit they are not going to develop a high school here or say they are, which I don't believe, or give you a long-term lease of the land."

Behr also promised to fight racism in labor unions.

Peevey promised to help push down interest rates for housing, but saw a solution to the development logjam in government-financed community development corporations.

Peevey is employed as coordinator of a University of California program to provide technical assistance to low income groups and has worked on such projects in Fresno and King counties, he said.

Mrs. Smart endorsed increased vocational education but said, "I don't believe in created jobs."

Otis Gaines of Marin City wasn't satisfied with the pace of community development. He questioned why shopping centers have been built all around it on "nothing but goop and mud" while Marin City has been bypassed. "What is wrong with Marin City?" he asked.

Behr said the problem is a population of only 2,000, but a woman said no one can move in because all the land is tied up by California Development Corp. and the high school district.

Peevey said, "Basically, low income community programs have to be developed so that people can participate and generate income to be kept in the community," he said.

Little questioning was directed to the Assembly candidates. Democrat Joseph A. Forest and AIP representative Glenn A. Bernd.

Forest ripped incumbent Republican William T. Bagley, whom Forest said did not attend last night's session because he was campaigning for Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif. He labeled Bagley the "absentee candidate."

Bernd called for eliminating bureaucratic "parasites." "Free enterprise is paying for every single entity in our life today," the Sebastopol businessman said. "Think about that. Every time you give a dollar to the government, they are chopping it right out of your pocket.

Although they had indicated they would attend, the Sixth Congressional District candidates, incumbent Republican William S. Mailliard and Democrat Russell R. Miller, did not attend, sending representatives instead.

San Francisco mortician Theorius W. Pannell represented Mailliard and said, "I've known him to be a person who would respect you and look into your interests," he said.

Joseph Verdi of San Francisco representing Miller, assailed the incumbent for never being available to the people and for absenting himself at close votes on an urban funds bill and extension of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

"If he is for minorities, how come he is not there on the crucial votes?" Verdi asked.

Garbage By Tons Tossed Into Street

LONDON (UPI)—Entire families, bothered by flies and sickened by scuttling rats, Friday night heaved tons of rancid garbage into the center of one of east London's busiest thoroughfares.

The garbage had been rotting on sidewalks during the past four weeks while city officials wrangled with striking municipal workers over pay demands.

"It's enough, just enough," housewife Mary Cornwall shouted at newsmen. "My three children are down with sore throats because of this garbage. My flat is swarming with flies. The air is putrid."

The outburst came after a protest meeting of about 300 persons in a nearby housing complex.

The nationwide strike was called by nearly 65,000 garbage collectors, sewage workers, street cleaners and other "dirty job" workers to force demands for a $6.60 a week wage increase.

The sidewalks of London are stacked high with accumulated garbage and the passage of daily crowds reshuffles unsightly litter strewn about subway entrances and downtown underpasses.

Police moved in when the garbage-throwing session began but only to place detour signs at the ends of the blocked street.

Neither Mailliard Nor Clausen A Rascal To Be Thrown Out

"MAILLIARD AND CLAUSEN both have experience. Neither has been a 'rascal' who should therefore be turned out. The Independent-Journal endorses both for re-election."

That's what the I-J said two years ago when Rep. William S. Mailliard and Rep. Don H. Clausen stood for election to Congress for new terms.

Both are now seeking new terms again. It is an appropriate time for reappraisal.

Bill Mailliard represented first the Fourth and then the Sixth Congressional District (a part of San Francisco) in Washington for more than a dozen years before reapportionment expanded his district to include southern and central Marin County.

It was a bitter pill to swallow when Marin was cut in two and divided between two congressional districts — Mailliard's Sixth and Clausen's First.

But like much bad-tasting medicine, it seemed to be good for the patient.

In a sense we have two congressmen with an eye out for Marin's interests in Washington instead of just one.

MAILLIARD WAS NOT a stranger to Marin or its people. He was born here. His family has a long history here. He was and is knowledgeable about Marin's people and our special concerns.

Politically, he would have to be regarded as a moderate or progressive Republican. (He served a couple of years as secretary to Earl Warren when the latter was California's governor.) He is not a flamboyant campaigner; he is a quiet, effective worker in Congress. His 18 years service in the House gives him the considerable influence of seniority.

Mailliard has involved himself in the problems of providing flood control in the Ross Valley while attempting at the same time to preserve esthetic and ecological values. He was an author of proposed legislation to include portions of Forts Barry, Baker and Cronkhite in a Golden Gate National Recreation Area. He is the elected chairman of the 16-man California Republican delegation in the House. With Clausen he co-authored the House bill that authorized $38 million to complete acquisition of Point Reyes National Seashore. He played a key role in getting the Army Engineers to move ahead with the much-needed dredging of San Rafael channel.

In short, Bill Mailliard has "given us our money's worth." He deserves re-election.

THE IRREPRESSIBLE Don Clausen just has to be well known to all in his district except the very newest arrivals.

He has represented the First California (Redwood Empire) District for a decade and during that time has traveled ceaselessly over the area, involving himself in every relevant issue.

He went into office originally with considerable support from commercial timber interests and, consequently, it was suspected that he would frequently be in opposition to conservation measures.

His record belies that suspicion.

He was a tireless worker for funds to complete acquisition of Point Reyes National Seashore, having been instrumental in getting White House support which led to the release of otherwise "frozen" funds.

Last year, with Mailliard, he coauthored a bill to expand Muir Woods National Monument by purchase of additional land.

He has supported funding for the acquisition of the Redwood National Park in Humboldt and Del Norte counties. He fought through the legislation which created the 45,000-acre King Range National Conservation area in Humboldt County. He supported the Fort Point preservation.

Recently he has joined with Mailliard to cooperate with the Golden Gate Bridge and Transportation District to obtain federal funds to help finance the district's entrance into commute bus operations.

Flood control, navigation, water conservation projects all over the district, including Marin, have had his active support. He was an author of amendments to the 1970 Federal Roads Bill which will increase federal funding of much needed improvements to Highway 101, the Redwood Highway.

His first District still includes western and northern Marin along with southern Sonoma county. He still maintains his interest in and support for measures which will benefit all of Marin.

He, too, deserves re-election.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Council's Attitude On Measure A

I would like to correct an erroneous impression left by your report of the Oct. 27 meeting of the San Anselmo City Council.

About 15 supporters of Proposition A were present, and I rose to make our presentation. I pointed out that since the council had just voted, in effect, to ignore our arguments, there was no point in making them.

When the council voted to reject our arguments before hearing them, it would have been more honest if it had also ruled our presentations out of order.

Practical To Back United Nations

I am writing this letter as a private citizen, but I am also the president of the Marin County chapter of the United States Association for the United Nations. (The U. S. organization supports the international United Nations but is not a part of it.)

Politically speaking, I consider myself to be a moderate. I think it is practical and realistic to support the United Nations since no other international structure exists. I hope the member nations will allow the U. N. to develop into a peace-keeping organization.

This small Marin County chapter seems far removed from monstrous international problems. Yet, it is an avenue for ideas from the "people" level, and that is what democracy is all about.

State Employees Rap Columnist

Replying to distorted reporting of your columnist, Henry C. MacArthur, is wearisome but necessary.

Several times a year, for at least 15 years, he has written unkindly about state employees. He is entitled to his opinion. I submit, however, that your readers are entitled to the facts on which he bases his opinions.

Mr. MacArthur recently deplored what he termed "defiance" of authority by a Sacramento chapter of the California State Employees' Association that had been ordered to stop printing its newsletter on state equipment. He said this is a sign that employees are starting to run the government.

The facts are that this small newsletter has been printed on state equipment for 10 years, with consent of the department. Employees do the work themselves, after hours, and pay for all materials used under employee relations provision that applies to CSEA and 11 other employee groups. It costs taxpayers nothing.

The so-called "defiance" of orders was nothing more than employees objecting to the unilateral breaking of an agreement and treating the matter as a scandal in the public press . . .

By the way, the chapter has continued printing the publication on a state press — using their own materials on their own time.

Growth Of A.A. Proves Worth Of Its System

By LOUIS CASSELS, UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Brace yourself. Here comes some of that stuff newspapers are accused of neglecting: GOOD NEWS.

It concerns the growth of one of the world's most useful organizations, Alcoholics Anonymous.

During the past year, more than 1,000 new A. A. groups were established. That brings the worldwide total to 16,000, more than three times as many as there were 10 years ago.

EACH A.A. GROUP is self-supporting and self-governing. The diffeernt groups keep in touch with each other through a general service office in New York. But there's not much central organization. So nobody can say exactly how many practicing A. A.'s there are at the moment.

The informed guess of the general service office is that the total is near 500,000. And its growing at a rate of about 10 per cent a year.

Perhaps the most encouraging news is that the average age of A. A. members has been decreasing steadily over the past few years. Instead of waiting until their lives have been ruined by alcoholism, people are admitting their problem and seeking A. A. help in the early stages of the disease.

NO ONE HAS yet found a treatment which will enable a true alcoholic to resume "normal drinking." But A. A. has proved, beyond a doubt, that an alcoholic can recover from his addictoin and go on to live a happy and useful life without alcohol.

He'll always be, in a famous A. A. phrase, "one drink away from a drunk." But the whole fellowship of A. A. stands ready to help him keep that distance. When he's tempted to take a drink, all he has to do is call another A. A. Day or night, rain or shine, winter or summer, every A. A. is ready to drop what he's doing to help another A. A. remember that sobriety is infinitely preferable to alcoholic oblivision under any and all circumstances.

MANY ATTEMPTS have been made by outsiders to explain how A. A. manages to succeed, when psychiatry and medical treatment so often fail, in restoring alcoholics to sobriety. Psychological terms such as—"group therapy" and "mutual reinforcement" are trotted out to make the explanations sound scientific.

But anyone who has seen A. A. work, close up, knows there is something more involved, something that cannot be reduced to a pat verbal fomrula.

A. A.'s don't bother too much trying to figure it out. All they know—and all that a prospective member needs to know—is that IT WORKS.

Nixon-Agnew Strategy Rejects Moderates Within Own Party

RICHMOND, Va. — In the never-never land of lost opportunity, this last capital of the Confederacy gets triple-star rating. Here was a model, if the Nixon administration had chosen to use it, of a southern strategy pointing to a genuine two-party South and a South moving out of the tired, old bog of racial fear and hostility.

The exemplar was Linwood Holton, the first Republican elected governor of Virginia since Reconstruction. With his doughty, good-humored persistence he built up Republican strength and to this he added the Negro vote and the support of defecting Democrats on both left and right to win election in his second try in 1969.

GOVERNOR HOLTON was determined to field a candidate for the Senate and build for him the kind of support that put Holton in the governor's chair. But the White House, with Harry Dent Jr. as the operating agent, had another game plan. Three times pressure was put on Holton to get Harry F. Byrd Jr., who had announced he would run for re-election as an independent, to turn Republican. Three times this effort failed.

The White House strategy then was to get Republican endorsement for Byrd as an independent. In a dramatic speech at the state convention which he loves to recount, Holton frustrated that strategy. The Republicans picked Ray L. Garland as their candidate for the Senate, and Holton proceeded to give him his forthright and active support.

From Washington the response was zero, virtually no money, no speakers, with the plain intimation that it would be nice if Garland would blow away and Byrd would be doubly sure to win. At the last minute Vice President Agnew gave Garland a once-over-lightly blessing, when in response to a press conference question he endorsed the Republican over Byrd.

Byrd, a pale copy of his father, the late Harry F. Byrd Sr., who so long dominated this state, is counted certain to win by most observers in a three-way race. As one veteran politico put it, he is a certain product in an uncertain time. Garland is an unimpressive candidate, and the Democrat, George C. Rawlings, is working a liberal line against Byrd conservatism, with the old shadow of "massive resistance" to integration in the background.

NEW YORK is, of course, a far more dramatic example of the Nixon-Agnew anything-to-win strategy. Agnew's effort to purge Sen. Charles Goodell in favor of the Conservative candidate, James L. Buckley, brought 19 Republican senators into the state to campaign for Goodell. Buckley would support the Nixon military-foreign policy while, as he has said, he would vote against the family welfare program that was the administration's star turn in the reform department.

The state of Washington is another example. Gov. Daniel J. Evans has been screaming for help for the Republican candidate for the Senate. Charles Elicker. The response is a trickle, with the powers in Washington apparently content to let the sitting Democrat, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, win re-election. Jackson carries the ball for the Nixon military budget, ABM and the new weapons systems the administration pushes. This is a vote of no-confidence in the strategy itself, since if they believed they were going to gain control of th Senate and the powerful armed services committee they would not have so much need for Jackson.

How To Get Rid Of Detergents? Could They Be Secret Weapon?

WASHINGTON — One of the big pollution problems seems to be the use of phosphates in detergents. It is believed that the dumping of phosphates in streams and rivers makes algae grow, which kills fish and other good things.

All the soap companies are working on new detergents that will eliminate phosphates and other harmful chemicals. The problem is "What does the housewife do with the detergent she already has in the closet?"

BURTON SCHELLENBACH of Mentor, Ohio, told me his wife has six $5 boxes of a brand-name detergent and, since she is ecology-minded, she tried to get rid of them immediately. But she couldn't. She was informed that if she and her neighbors dumped their unwanted boxes down the drain at the same time, Lake Erie would develop a frothy head two feet high.

Schellenbach thought to bury the boxes in the back yard, but a chemist friend warned him if he did this, the detergents would eventually drain and destroy all the well-water in Ohio.

An attempt to destroy the boxes by fire failed, as detergents just don't burn.

SCHELLENBACH, in desperation, contacted the Nerve Gas Disposal Unit of the Army, who refused to help him. They said they had enough trouble getting rid of their nerve gas, and besides, if they dumped detergents off a ship, as they did with nerve gas, they'd only pollute the ocean.

A call to the detergent company, asking them if they would take Mrs. Schellenbach's boxes off her hands, was met with a cold response. "Once the detergent is purchased," the vice president in charge of phosphates said, "it is no longer our problem."

Every night when Schellenbach came home, his wife asked, "Did you find a way to get rid of it?"

Schellenbach always shook his head. "We could dump it in a junked car lot."

"But," his wife protested, "we wouldn't be doing anything for ecology that way. The stuff would still get in the streams. We have to dispose of it without destroying our environment."

AFTER THINKING about it for days, and being haunted by the detergent boxes in his closet at night, Schellenbach finally came up with a plan. It was so wild that he was afraid to mention it, even to his wife. But he called me in Washington because he needed me to get through to the right people.

"Listen," he said. "I have this idea how the United States can get rid of all its phosphate detergents and also strike a blow for the free world."

"Great, Schellenbach! Tell me what it is."

"We get an old surplus cargo ship and outfit it with a lot of phony spy gear on top and inside. In the holds, we load phosphate detergents. It may take some cramming, but we could do it.

"Then we name the ship the 'Pueblo II' and send it into the coastal waters off North Korea."

"I THINK I'm following you," I said.

"The North Koreans grab the ship and suddenly they're stuck with all our phosphate detergents."

"It might work," I told him excitedly. "Each month we could send a spy ship until all the phosphate detergents in the United States are gone."

"The North Koreans would be up to their ears in detergent," Schellenbach said, "and we would be the first country to destroy another with cleanliness."

DAVID TO THE NAVY

A Break With Tradition

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — David Eisenhower broke with his family tradition of army service when he entered Naval Officers School last weekend at Newport, R.I.

His grandfather, the late Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, was mainly responsible for steering David into the Navy. The former President did so in the knowledge that his grandson did not want to undertake a lifetime military career.

The general and David's father, John Eisenhower, also a West Pointer, advised David while in collere that the Navy "was better for a married man not inclined on a military career."

David, 22-year-old son-in-law of President Nixon, also acknowledges that a low number in the draft lottery was an added incentive to volunteer for the Navy now that his undergraduate career is ended.

"I'm looking forward to the Navy," says David with a broad grin, "even though I was raised in an army family."

Then he adds somewhat wistfully, "I've always been reluctant to jump into something new."

David made the comments in interviews across the country as he ended a last sprint of frenetic campaigning for Republican candidates before donning the uniform.

"I'm going to be kind of out of it for three years," he was overheard to say as he walked through the White House which has been home to him and his wife, Julie, for the past four months.

During his 18 weeks of training at Newport, David will be on a par with an enlisted man second class until he is commissioned an ensign at the end of his course. He will have to hit the deck every morning at 4:30 and be ready for reveille at 5.

At the end of training, he will have a choice of duty assignments. The Navy, however, encourages most of its young officers to request a ship for their first tour of duty.

While at Newport, David will be off duty most weekends and will be allowed to maintain an apartment for visits by his wife. She also will be invited to attend "sports night" on Friday evening at the installation.

Under recent Navy rules, he may have to cut his hair a bit shorter, but not much. If he wishes, he can grow sideburns down to the middle of the ear lobe, longer than he presently wears them.

In the service, David will be making more money than he has ever made —$422.68 a month and if the 20 per cent pay raise goes through, he will be up to $477.86 a month.

"I'll miss him, but I know he is doing the right thing," says 22-year-old Julie, who is taking a teaching course at Catholic University in Washington.

So far they have put off having a family.

Julie, softly feminine but a strong and dominant wife in the Eisenhower household, is much less outgoing than David who has won the friendship of all the White House staffers.

They will miss the tousled haired sports loving David who always had a kind word for everyone who served while he made his home on the third floor of the President's house.

David still approaches his in-laws with gracious deference. To David, the president is "Mr. Nixon" and the first lady is "Mrs. Nixon."

"We just love David," Mrs. Nixon warmly sums up her feelings.

David's poise, affability and know-how on the political stump also has earned him the respect of Republican party leaders who more and more, with Nixon's high approval, are dubbing him the "heir apparent."

But if you ask David about future plans, he will say: "The future seems so far away, I haven't stopped to think about it."

He has nebulous plans to enter law school, perhaps at the University of Virginia or in California when he completes his service hitch. But he is not ready to say that politics will be his career afterwards.

While campaigning for a GOP candidate in South Carolina earlier this week the question came up and he asserted:

"When I consider three years in the Navy and three years in law school, then my future is so far in front of me that I can't give consideration to anything else."

Striking to observers is David's affinity for his father-in-law since he has been on the hustings of late. They say he is beginning to sound "more like Nixon than Nixon himself."

Because of campus violence and unrest, David's last days at Amherst College were not happy. He did not attend his graduation ceremonies and received his B.A. degree in the mail. It was his choice to avoid one more confrontation.

On learning that I.F. Stone, the left-of-center author-columnist would deliver the commencement address, David decided to spare the first family any possible embarassment of antiwar demonstrations.

His campus troubles were heightened when Nixon's Cambodian action stirred up intensified college student turbulence.

David staunchly supports the administration view. While he says he does not believe any one could be "blamed" for campus disorder, he adds: "I think that what is really wrong is that the university communities are thinking of themselves as political interest groups." "They believe," he continued, "that they should be consulted on national issues."

Like many of his peers, David says, "The faculties are the ones to exert moral leadership over students and it is up to them to say 'let's save the universities.'"

He does not agree with the Scranton Report on Campus Unrest that contended it is the President's role to exert "moral leadership" to bring student strife to an end.

I have heard it said that sending troops into Cambodia was a personal threat to students," David recently recalled. "What is it about being students that gives them a distinct image? Why can't they be just citizens?"

David and his father-in-law can sit and talk sports for hours.

No one was happier than David when he held a part-time job with the Washington Senators baseball team last summer.

David has never been short on courage. He has faced student protesters, been heckled by campus militants and been challenged to debates. Throughout, he has held his ground.

He basks in the aura of the presidency. As a boy and the grandson of a President, the White House was his romping ground. When 'Ike' was leaving 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, David left a few signs behind which said in fun: "I shall return."

But his present sights are a bit lower. In recent campaigning he simply says that as long as he is going into the Navy he wants to make sure a Republican Senate is "making foreign policy."

GERRYMANDER'S GHOST

Key To States' Power

By RAYMOND LAHR

WASHINGTON (UPI)—More than 6,300 state legislators, to be elected Nov. 3 from the bottom of the ballot, will influence the direction of American politics for the next decade.

Most of them are unknown outside of their home states. Many are unknown within their own districts.

Forty-five states will elect legislators next month. These lawmakers and their counterparts in the five states not holding legislative elections this year will fix the boundaries of congressional and state legislative districts to fit 1970 census figures.

This is the first census since the Supreme Court began to issue its one-man, one-vote decisions in 1961. Previously, it was common for legislatures to ignore mandates for reapportionment after a census. When they did write redistricting bills, the legislators were most interested in protecting seats held by themselves, their friends and fellow members of their political parties.

The trend of the Supreme Court decisions has been toward requiring almost exact equality of population in districts for the election of state legislators and members of the U.S. House of Representatives. The decisions have drastically limited the power of the legislatures to be arbitrary or carefree in reapportionment.

But the court has not (at least, not yet) interfered with the power to gerrymander—to shape a district in the form of a salamander, an octopus or an hourglass—for the benefit of the party controlling the legislature.

The court decisions will compel more congressional and legislative redistricting than was ever anticipated after any earlier census.

Hence the national political parties have been more interested than ever before in winning control of legislatures. Despite the requirement for population equality, the shaping of districts can contribute to party control of the national House of Representatives.

A Democratic legislature can shift a Republican area into a safe Republican district and move a Democratic area into a competitive district to improve Democratic chances of dislodging a Republican incumbent. A Republican legislature can do the same for the benefit of the GOP.

After the 1968 elections, Republicans and Democrats each controlled both houses of the legislature in 20 states. Each controlled one of two houses in eight other states. Minnesota legislative candidates do not run under national party labels and Nebraska's one-house legislature is elected on a nonpartisan basis.

Governors can veto reapportionment bills and legislatures can override vetoes. From a partisan viewpoint, the ideal situation is to have the governor and his party in control of both houses of the legislature in a state.

After 1968, the GOP had the governorships and controlled both houses in 15 states with 39.2 per cent of the nation's population. The Democrats had comparable control in 12 states with 23.4 per cent of the population.

When Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma was Democratic national chairman, he appointed a committee to advise state party organizations on winning control of legislatures. That committee has been inactive.

But an office has been maintained in Republican national headquarters for more than a year to give whatever help it can to elect Republicans to state legislatures. That office is occupied by John Rowe, a product of Republican politics in Indiana and Indianapolis.

Rowe has traveled to 22 states to participate in Republican workshops and to coach GOP legislative candidates. He has found that the party label and the coattails of a strong candidate for governor or U.S. senator are more important than advice from Washington.

As Rowe puts it, a candidate's brother-in-law is apt to be his unpaid, part-time campaign manager.

Legislative candidates have small campaign budgets. They cannot afford television. They can use direct mail, radio spots, billboards, posters and bumper stickers. They also can use their feet —to campaign from door-to-door or in shopping centers. If greatest importance is the strength of the local party organization. Not all state legislators are obscure. In some of the more heavily populated states, a state senatorial district may be half the size or even equal in population to a congressional district.

However, many voters can identify neither their congressmen nor their members in the state legislature.

Rowe found that rural voters were more likely to know their state legislators than those living in cities.

Because of population shifts and uneven population growth, most states will have to draw new congressional districts.

Five states—Vermont, Delaware, Wyoming, Nevada and Alaska—have no problem because each has only one member of the house. Preliminary census figures indicate that North Dakota also will have only one member starting in 1973.

Estimates by the house census subcommittee staff projected a gain of five house seats for California, three for Florida and one each for Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut and Texas. New York and Pennsylvania each would lose two seats, and eight other states—Alabama, Iowa, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee, West Virginia and Wisconsin—each would lose one.

All of the 45 states electing legislators next month will fill all seats in the lower houses. Some will elect all members of state senates and others will elect half of the senators. The Republican National Committee has calculated that 6,329 legislators will be elected Nov. 3.

States which do not hold legislative elections this year are New Jersey, Virginia, Kentucky, Mississippi and Louisiana.

All 50 states presumably must reapportion their legislatures to reflect the new census figures. Since the Supreme Court asserted jurisdiction over legislative apportionment in 1962, every state has redistricted at least once.

The court still has not laid down hard guidelines for apportionment. Unless or until it does, federal courts will get an endless series of lawsuits from voters or political parties who believe that legislatures have been unfair in adopting redistricting plans.

Behind The News

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

President Nixon went politicking this week as the campaign drew to a close and Tuesday's election approached.

The President stumped for candidates in Florida, Texas, Illinois, Minnesota, Nebraska and California with the hope of giving the Republican President control of the U.S. Senate—if not by a Republican majority at least with help from conservative Democrats.

At some appearances, Nixon was jeered by young people. At San Jose, Calif., demonstrators threw eggs, rocks and bottles at him in the most disorderly protest he has faced as chief executive.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew campaigned in the South. He pledged the administration's support of neighborhood schools.

Sen. Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y., whom Agnew has criticized as a "radical liberal," decided to keep running. There was speculation Goodell would support his Democratic opponent, Rep. Richard Ottinger, rather than see Conservative James L. Buckley, the White House favorite, win.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad, in a U.N. General Assembly debate on the Mideast—the first since the 1967 war—urged that Israel be forced to withdraw from occupied Arab territory. Foreign Minister Abba Eban of Israel responded by calling for Egypt to pull back missiles from the ceasefire line before negotiations resume. A Cairo newspaper said Egypt was willing to extend the ceasefire in the Mideast for two months.

The United States demanded that Russia return an Army plane, two U.S. Army generals, a major and a Turkish colonel who strayed into Soviet Armenia a week earlier. The State Department called their detention a violation of the consular convention with the United States.

The United States and the Soviet Union agreed to develop systems so spaceships of both nations could dock with one another.

Paul A. Samuelson, a Massachusetts Institute of Technology professor, won the Nobel Prize in economics. Luis F. Leloir of Argentina was honored in chemistry and Louis Neel of the University of Grenoble and Hannes Alfven of the University of California in San Diego shared the physics award.

Dr. Salvador Allende, a Marxist, was formally named as the next president of Chile. Gen. Rene Schneider, the Chilean Army commander in chief, died of gunshot wounds blamed on rightists.

Jean Drapeau was re-elected mayor of Montreal in an election that lacked terrorist incidents that had been threatened by Quebec separatists. There still was no definite word on the fate of James R. Cross, the British diplomat held by the terrorist FLQ.

Japan's Liberal-Democratic party elected Premier Eisaku Sato to a fourth two-year term.

Cassius Clay returned to the ring for the first time in more than three years. He scored a technical knockout over Jerry Quarry in the third round of their bout scheduled for 15 rounds at Atlanta.

ON NOV. 3 BALLOT

Candidates List Includes Ex-Priest

By TRACY WOOD

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's off-beat political candidates this fall include an ex-priest-turned-politician and the widows of two famous men —comedian Harpo Marx and murdered civil rights leader Medgar Evers.

The sons of two prominent politicians—Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and former California Gov. Edmund G. Brown —also are on the ballot.

The ex-priest, Richard Pfaff, is a 35-year-old former Jesuit missionary. He received permission from the Catholic church to leave his post in Zambia, Africa, when he become strongly interested in politics.

Pfaff, a Democrat, is running against Republican Assemblyman Frank Murphy of Santa Cruz.

Pfaff left the priesthood in 1968 motivated by the assassinations of Martin Luther King Jr. and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, the presidential candidacy of Sen. Eugene McCarthy and the decision of President Johnson not to seek re-election.

Pfaff is running a strong pro-conservation campaign and attacking his opponent for backing an unsuccessful attempt to enact a law benefiting the Boise Cascade Lumber Corp. It would have cut off fishing access to some privately developed lakes.

In eastern Los Angeles County, Myrlie Evers, widow of Medgar Evers, is the Democratic congressional candidate running in the conservative and heavily Republican district now represented by Rep. John Rousselot, a former official of the John Birch Society.

Rousselot won the seat in a special election in June to fill the vacancy created by the death of GOP Rep. Glennard P. Lipscomb.

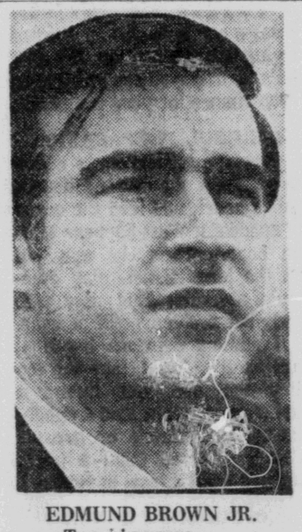

Mrs. Evers and her three children moved to Claremont from Mississippi in 1964 after her husband was assassinated.

"If I were to choose a district to run in, it would probably be just the opposite of this one," said Mrs. Evers. "It's a gerrymandered district for Republicans."

Susan Marx, the white-haired widow of Harpo Marx, is a third-term member of the Palm Springs Unified School Board.

A Democrat, she is running for the Assembly seat being vacated by Republican Victor V. Veysey, a candidate for Congress.

Mrs. Marx' Democratic opponent is Raymond Seeley of Blythe, a member of the board of supervisors.

Other famous names in November election contests include Barry Goldwater Jr. and Edmund G. (Jerry) Brown Jr.

The Republican son of Senator Goldwater is seeking his first full term in Congress.

Edmund G. Brown Jr., son of the former Democratic governor, is seeking his first elective office.

Brown's Republican opponent is James L. Flournoy, the only black candidate ever to be nominated by a major party for a statewide office.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Give Your Opponent A Trick, Ask For A Treat In Return

If you haven't been looking at the calendar lately, tonight is Halloween, and you can expect the neighborhood children to ring your bell seven or eight times to pose the traditional demand: "Trick or treat." If your happen to be playing bridge tonight, you can make the same demand on your opponents.

REAL PROBLEMS

West opens the three of hearts, and you see that the location of the king of hearts is completely unimportant. Your only real problems are in the black suits.

It would be reasonable to take the ace of hearts, ruff a heart to reach your hand and then lead the queen of spades for a finesse. If the finesse succeeded, you could later afford to lose a club trick. If the spade finesse lost, however, you would have very little chance to avoid the loss of a club.

BETTER PLAY

A better line of play depends on the fact that playing the ace of spades with only three trumps out is almost as good as trying the finesse. If the king fails to drop, you can still get an even chance for your contract.

CAREFUL PREPARATION

Careful preparation is necessary. Take the ace of hearts, ruff a heart, and lead the queen of spades. If West happens to be an honor-coverer, he may put up the king. If not, play dummy's ace. The king may fall, and your problems will be over.

If nothing delicious happens, ruff another heart, take the top diamonds and ruff dummy's last diamond. Now lead a spade, announcing "Trick or treat." You have given them a trick, and you want a treat in return.

OPPONENT'S HONOR

If East leads a red suit, you will ruff in your hand, discarding dummy's losing club. If East leads a club, you will play for the queen and jack to be in separate hands. Whether East leads high or low, you can capture one opponent's club honor and finesse through the other opponent's honor.

You hold:

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three hearts.

If partner bids three notrump, you will bid four diamonds. You expect to make several more tricks at a red suit than partner can make at notrump. Ideally, you will score a game; at worst, you will go down less than he would at two or three no-trump.

Hang-ups do exist, though — no one denies it.

"The most persistent problem has been the upsetting experience of bumping into a lifestyle different from our own," said Rev. George D. Carter, minister at the church.

"We members of the straight world, or the Establishment, find it easy to relate to people like us, people with jobs and homes and families. But it's often hard to relate to the young street person with long hair and no job."

Established church members would welcome them at Sunday services, Carter said, "But having them live here was a different matter. It's hard for some of them to accept."

To ease the cultural shock, the church had to undergo a long period of self-appraisal before finally agreeing to give the pad a home.

The idea was advanced for the first time last December, when eight Southern Marin churches formed an ecumenical group called TEAM and decided to sponsor the Street Ministry.

"Each church was given a different task, and it was decided that our church would house the crash pad," Carter said.

A five-man committee to oversee the pad was formed, and began to study the thorny problem of administering it. Numerous meetings followed with the Street Ministry and its co-directors, Doug Medley and Fred Schmidgall, before the committee devised a six-point list of rules under which the pad was to operate.

The committee decided that no more than 15 transients a night would be allowed to stay, and set a three-night limit during any one week. All illegal activities were banned, including drugs, alcohol and sex, and hours of operation 8 p.m. to 8:30 a.m., were set up. Two or three ministry staffers would be present each night, it was decided.

Part of the resulting problems —and there have been some — arose from the fact that the original Street Ministry staffers have moved in, to be replaced by new ones who only a month ago were transients themselves.

Louise Waschow, a member of the church's crash pad committee, admitted there have been a few problems with rules, but hopes that recent meetings with the new staff have ironed out the difficulties.

At those meetings, she said, "We tried to give reasons why we set up rules the way we did. Now they (staff members) have dug in and are trying to enforce them."

Mrs. Waschow, who says she is "quite delighted" about the pad, feels it has taught her one important thing: "I've learned to get beyond appearances and put my Christian love to work in dealing with people who don't look like me."

Although rumor among Street Ministry staffers has it that the church's administrative board is considering closing the pad, Mrs. Waschow said her committee will recommend that it be allowed to stay.

"It's so very important to keep communication going between young people and church people, and the only way to do that is to have contact," she said. Wednesday night rap sessions and potluck suppers allow this contact.

Although the crash pad is one of the Street Ministry's most visible endeavors, it is by no means the only one. Other services include legal and medical help, a job co-op and rap sessions between police and street people.

The ministry is sponsored by the eight Southern Marin churches comprising TEAM (not an acronym): Sausalito Presbyterian, Mill Valley Methodist, Our Lady of Mount Carmel, Christ Episcopal, Church of Our Savior, St. Andrew Presbyterian, Mill Valley Community and Westminster Presbyterian.

The ministry also publishes a newspaper, Let It Be, from its offices at the Sausalito Presbyterian Church.

Charles Cox and James Sonju, two staffers who spend two weeks on duty at the pad and two weeks off, admit they have not enforced some of the rules.

But, they say, they were given "a certain amount of discretion" in administering the pad. "It's hard to turn somebody away on a rainy night because the 15-person limit has been reached," Cox said.

Pleased with the overall operation of the crash pad, Sonju would like to see one thing: "More church people should come to the rap sessions. They're not taking advantage of one of the pad's most basic functions. We had some good encounter groups in May and June, but it's slacked off since then."

For the future, the Street Ministry hopes to expand the pad concept to include a supper and breakfast, not just a floor to sleep on.

The group has applied to the federal government for surplus food under the price support program, and is seeking storage space in anticipation of approval of the application.

Meanwhile, Sonju and Cox and the other staffers continue to, as Carter said, "Play house mother for 15 transients a night" at the Methodist Church crash pad.

(Next week: A look at a Wednesday night rap session.)

Vatican Puts Lid On Liturgy Experiments

By BARRY JAMES

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—The Vatican has forbidden any Roman Catholic liturgy, such as the holding of Mass in private homes and use of unorthodox garments by priests, Vatican sources reported this week.

The ban is part of a still unpublished "instruction" on liturgical practice issued by the Congregation for Divine Worship. Advance copies of the document have been sent to the bishops throughout the world.

The document specifically prohibits experimentation with the Mass, the central form of Roman Catholic worship, unless the Congregation gives permission.

It specifies Mass can be celebrated only in a sacred place except by special permission of the local bishop. Thus it forbids masses in private homes, which have become popular in the United States and in some parts of Europe.

Liturgical reforms instituted by the Vatican Ecumenical Council and put into effect by Pope Paul VI have been attacked by traditionalists as too sweeping and by liberals as not going far enough.

"Now comes the necessity for every section of the church's community to deepen its grasp of the renewal of the Mass" while "abandoning individual preferences," the Congregation said.

The reforms have simplified the Roman Catholic Mass and are intended to bring those attending actively into the worship instead of being passive onlookers.

The biggest reform was translation from Latin to modern languages.

There is also a greater reliance on biblical texts and freedom to use a large selection of prayers, including many beautiful texts which have been vitrually unused for centuries.

However, the new instruction forbids use of any but biblical readings in mass and says fixed prayers already approved by the Congregation cannot be replaced, although priests may use other prayers for local needs or special occasions.

The instruction said bishops' conferences could consider new forms of music to be played during the Mass "providing they suitably pray, express the mystery of Christ, help active participation and are in harmony with the spirit of mass."

It said priests must wear what it termed proper vestments while celebrating Mass. They were forbidden for example to merely place a stole over their regular suit or cassock.

"AGAINST EVERYTHING!"
This is what a certain minister said recently of The Orthodox Presbyterian Church. This may well be a compliment for any church in a day of moral permissiveness, doctrinal perversion and flagrant unbelief of Biblical Christianity even within many churches. But let us look at the ledger. WE ARE AGAINST the forces of unbelief in the visible church. We are AGAINST the National & World Councils of churches which are dominated by liberals who continually make political pronouncements. We are AGAINST Godless Communism and AGAINST the forces of evil seeking to destroy our christian heritage. But as those who have attended our services will testify we are FOR many things, and our ministry is pre-eminently a positive ministry. WE ARE FOR the Bible as God's Infallible Word. We are FOR upholding the honor of Jesus Christ as the virgin-born, sinless, crucified, risen and coming Lord of Glory. We are FOR salvation of Grace through the shed blood of Jehovah-Jesus. We are FOR a true ecumenism which calls for oneness based upon fidelity to the Word of Christ and the Christ of the Word. We should never forget that the permissive attitude that is not AGAINST everything evil is never FOR anything worthwhile.

Businessman Wages Fight With Bulldozer

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI)—Bernard Gutman fears that the bulldozer—combined with ignorance and indifference—is destroying America, architecturally speaking.

He foresees a day when America will be a sea of glass, brick and aluminum siding, and even the most mundane wooden building will have become a rarity on the landscape.

To fend off that day, Gutman founded the non-profit Historic Site Coordinating Committee earlier this year to act as a clearing house for persons and groups interested in preserving the country's architectural heritage.

"I have a pure motive and a profit motive," he said in an interview, explaining frankly that his firm, Delco Corp., is in the business of refurbishing homes.

"But if anything is going to be done," he said, "It's going to be done for a profit motive. I think a job like this has to be done by private industry and the real way to get private industry interested is to show a way to make a profit, as well as doing some good.

"If you want something done, you have to appeal to a selfish motive. I've been on too many well-meaning committees that have gone nowhere."

Gutman said he is not interested only in really historical buildings associated with important people or events, but also in good examples of the various styles of architecture popular in different periods of American history or in different parts of the country. These would include the Cape Cod homes of New England, the colonial and federal styles of the east, as well as the Victorian wedding cake houses of the midwest and the west.

"I'm appalled by the wholesale destruction of some of the finest remaining examples of Colonial, Georgian, Tuscan, Tudor, Gothic revival and antebellum architecture," he said.

"We are destroying a lot of what our forefathers created for us. Go to Europe and you see the flavor of the different cities. They don't tear down churches to put up aluminum and glass skyscrapers."

Gutman hopes his committee will act as a clearing house for commercial home refurbishers, alerting them to the need for preserving buildings, particularly those over 100 years old. He also hopes it will be able to help community groups interested in such projects, and individuals whom may be in doubt about the status of their own homes.

"The committee isn't trying to sell anything," he said, "but we can act as a clearing house for information, we can put groups in contact with sources of information or with each other. We can help individuals, either with educational material or by looking over photographs of homes and advising them what they've got."

Gutman pointed out that groups such as the National Trust for Historic Preservation in Washington, D.C., have literature available either free or for a nominal fee, on evaluating and restoring historic buildings. He said his colleagues should have such material on hand, or be able to refer homeowners and others to the proper source of needed material. He added the historic Site Coordinating Committee (534 Merrick Road, Lynbrook L.I. 11563) would provide such help.

"Private enterprise can make a real contribution to the American scene," Gutman said. "If someone doesn't do something soon, we're all going to wake up some morning 30 years from now and ask, 'What did we do?'"

Hawks Take Joe's Latest Jump To Court

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — The Caroloia Cougars, who lost a $2 million bidding war with the Atlanta Hawks for rookie Pete Maravich, retaliated Friday by signing Joe Caldwell, the Hawks' holdout star.

Caldwell, famed for his jumping ability and an exciting player who helped lead the Hawks to the National Basketball Association's Western Division championship a year ago, signed a multi-year contract with the American Basketball Association Cougars. Details of the new contract were not divulged.

He played Friday night, scoring 22 points in a 104-98 loss to Virginia.

The Atlanta Constitution quoted unidentified Hawks' officials today as saying "We'll definitely stop him from playing. We will file suit tomorrow morning to get an injunction as soon as we get a judge to hear our complaint."

The newspaper also quoted NBA President Walter Kennedy as saying "The only comment I will make at this time is that such action (on the part of the Cougars) hardly enhances the possibility of an ultimate merger between the two leagues."

SHOCKED

Atlanta Coach Richie Guerin said he was "very disappointed and shocked.

"I spoke to Joe once and to (his agent) Marshal Boyar four or five times last night and again to Boyar at 11:15 Friday morning.

"In our last conversation, Boyar told me he was coming for a face-to-face talk Saturday morning and that Joe had told him it was 100 per cent all right to believe in what we promised," Guerin continued.

"Now I'm talking about Joe Caldwell and I am talking about his agent Boyar. They said they were coming to talk. I don't fault anybody trying to take care of their future, but to me a man's word is his bond."

After turning in his best performance in six years as a pro when he averaged 21.1 points a game for Atlanta last season, Caldwell announced he would not play unless given a new, richer contract. Some sources said he wanted a multi-year, $1 million pact. As negotiations dragged on, it became apparant Caldwell and the Hawks were not about to resolve their money differences. There were reports Carolina wanted him. Friday, the Cougars got him.

SECOND

Caldwell was the second Atlanta player in less than two years to jump to the ABA. Center Zelmo Beatty made the switch to the Los Angeles Stars before the 1969-70 campaign.

Caldwell, a 6-5 forward-guard who starred at Arizona State and will be 29 on Sunday, broke in with the NBA as Detroit's No. 1 draft pick in 1964. The following year he was traded to the Hawks, then in St. Louis. He came to Atlanta with the team in 1968. The past two years he made the NBA all-star team.

In six seasons, Caldwell scored 7,127 points for a 15.1 average and pulled down 2,367 rebounds.

His value to the Hawks came not only in his scoring, but in an ability to inspire his teammates, either as a starter or a "sixth man" who came in, fresh, to get things rolling cohesively again.

Seals Finally Win A Game

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

It was a night that would even bring a smile to the usually taut lips of Charles O. Finely.

His newest acquisition in the world of pro sports—the California Golden Seals — established a couple of firsts in smothering expansionist Buffalo 6-1 in the only National Hockey League game played Friday night.

It was the first victory of the season for the Seals after seven losses and two ties. The six goals was a season-high for the Seals, exceeding by three their previous high in a season opening loss to Detroit.

And better still, veterans Bill Hicke and Earl Ingarfield burst into the goal-scoring column for the first time this season to end a 10-game drought.

"They played well," said coach Fred Glover. "I only hope this means that we have finally turned the corner this season. We also should have won our last two starts against New York and St. Louis but got only a tie (with New York) out of it."

But much to Finley's dismay, only 4,463 fans witnessed one of the finest offensive outbursts of the Seals since they were born three years ago. Their 48 shots on Buffalo goalies Joe Daley and Roger Crozier were a club record.

Hicke and defenseman Carol Vadnais each tallied two goals for the Seals. Both of Hicke's came in the second period moments after Crozier replaced Daley who was struck on the forehead by a stick.

Vadnais scored at 13:40 of the opening period on a rebound after Ted Hampson opened the scoring 22 seconds into the game. Vadnais also picked up a loose puck two minutes into the final period and rifled a 40-foot shot that glanced off the pipe past Crozier.

Ingarfield's first 1970-71 goal came with only 13 seconds left in the game on a tip-in of Doug Roberts' shot.

Rookie Gil Perreault netted his third goal of the season late in the second period to cut the Seals leod to 3-1.

Score by periods:

Buffalo	0 1 0—1
California	2 2 2—6

First period—1, California, Hampson 3 (B. Hicke, Howell) 0:22; 2. California, Vadnais 2 (Jarrett, Hampson) 13:40. Penalties-Watson 15:19.

Second period—3. California, B. Hicke 1 (Croteau, Ingarfield) 12:25; 4. Buffalo, Perreault 3 (Meehan, Schmautz) 16:52; 5. California, B. Hicke 2 (Muloin, Howell) 18:53. Penalty—Watson 17:44.

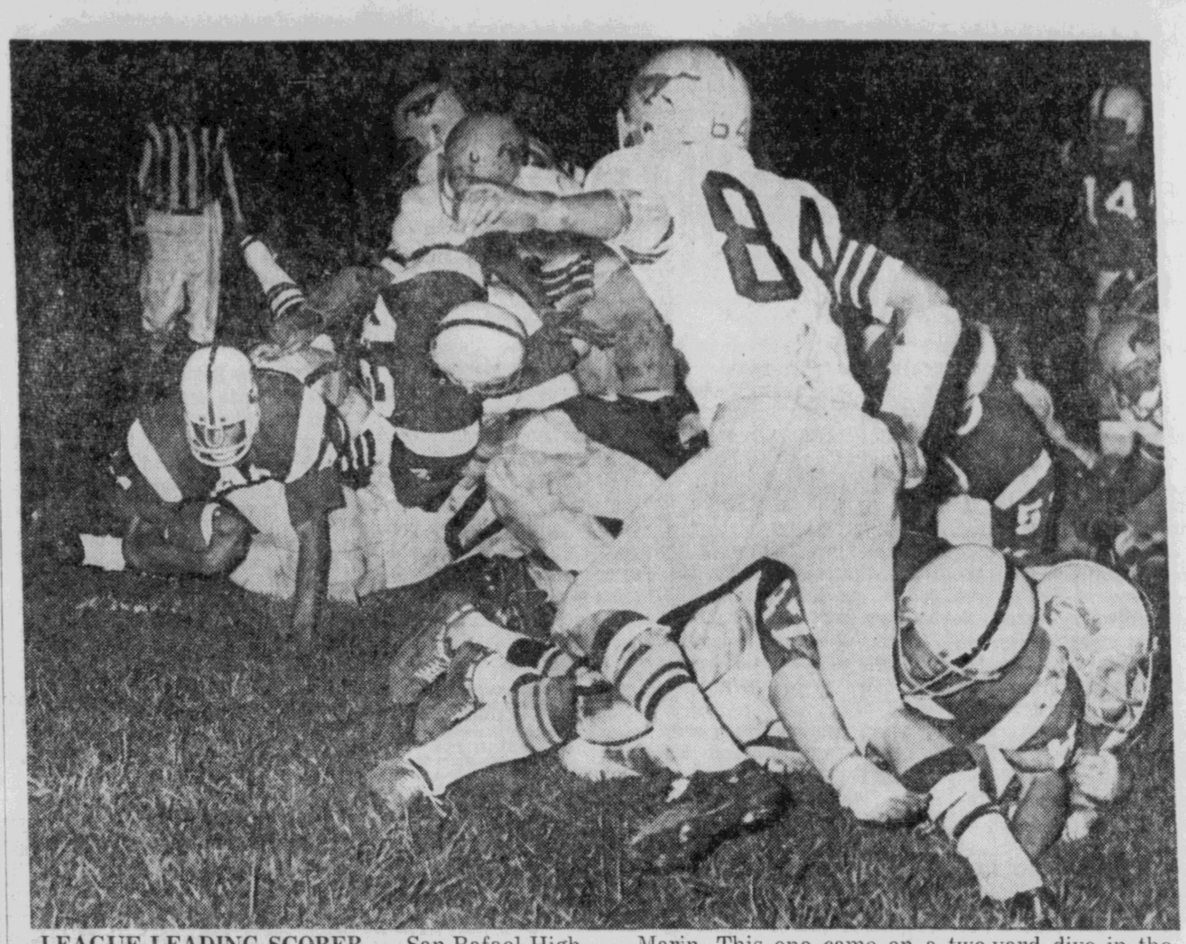

Third period—6. California, Vadnais 3 (unassisted) 2:02; 7. California, Ingarfield 1 (Roberts, Ehman) 19:47. Penalties—Croteau 2:29, Vadnais (major) 13:34, Krake (major) 13:34.

Shots on goal:

Buffalo	8 7 6—21
California	13 17 18—48

Goaltenders: Buffalo—Daley, Crozier; California—G. Smith.

LEAGUE LEADING SCORER — San Rafael High School's Scott Duncan scored three touchdowns last night, giving him 11 for the season, as he led the Bulldogs to a 28-0 homecoming win over San Marin. This one came on a two-yard dive in the third quarter. No. 84 for San Marin is Steve Fowler.

Bulldogs' Third Straight Shutout

By DAVID EINSTEIN

San Rafael High Schol put the blitz on last night.

Led by incomparable Scott Duncan, the Bulldogs swept past San Marin for the second straight 28-0 victory, their third consecutive shutout and their fourth win in as many Marin County Athletic League football games this year.

The win, viewed by a homecoming crowd of 3,000 at San Rafael High School, set the stage for next Friday night's battle between San Rafael and Terra Linda that will decide the MCAL championship.

GROUND GAME

Last night the Bulldogs played their kind of football as they handed the Mustangs of Novato their third loss in four league games. Quarterback Dirk Gansloser directed a sweeping running attack that netted 247 yards, and a lightning-like defense kept the visitors out of San Rafael territory until the final minutes.

Once again it was halfback Duncan who spearheaded the ground game. The 5-foot-10, 170-pound senior rambled for 116 yards, his second straight 100-plus game, and scored the last three touchdowns. He now has 11 touchdowns on the easson, enough to put him in the top 10 among scoring leaders in Northern California.

EACH PERIOD

As was the case last week against Redwood, San Rafael scored in every period. Fullback Dave Urquhart got things going with an eight-yeard burst late in the first quarter, capping a 43-yard drive that began with an interception by Dan Meredith.

Duncan's scoring runs covered 20, one and two yards, the first was a beautiful individual effort that saw him break a half dozen tackles.

The Mustangs were never in the game after a clipping penalty nullified a magnificent touchdown run of 75 yards on a punt return by Mike Van Horn in the second period. That would have cut the score to 14-7, but instead the Bulldogs just kept rolling.

As it was, the Mustangs were held to 55 total yards by the overpowering San Rafael defense. Tackles Doug Puskar and Doug Diego and middle linebacker Al Zitek led the charge that dropped San Marin rushers for a net loss of eight yards.

BRIGHT STAR

The only offense the Mustangs could generate came late in the game, when sophomore Hoza Wright came in at quarterback.

Expertly completing four of six passes under a tremendous pass rush, Wright drove his team to the San Rafeal 30-yard line before time ran out. He dropped back and set up faster, and scrambled and found the open man better than any quarterback this writer has seen this season, and his performance must surely have inspired San

Aaron Retains Sahara Lead; Nicklaus Gets A Reprieve

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI)— Jack Nicklaus was ready to pack his bags and head for home but he got a reprieve, you might say, in the shadow of the guillotine.

Nicklaus shot 76-69—145, just good enough to make the 36-hole cut at the $100,000 Sahara invitational.

Tht leader after two rounds was Georgia's Tommy Aaron who shot an unsensational 71 Friday after a blazing 64 in the first round. His 36-hole total of 135, seven under par, was still good for a two-stroke lead, the same as he had after the first round. In second place were three pros at 137—Bert Greene, Sun River, Ore., 68-69; Wilf Homenuik, Winnipeg, Canada, 69-68; and Dave Stockton, Westlake Village, Calif., the PGA king, with 70-67.

The low 70s and ties qualified for the final two rounds of this tournament which ends Sunday and that meant 85 pros were left.

Among those who did not make the cut were Frank Beard with 73-75—148; Ken Still, winner of the Kaiser Open last weekend, who had 72-74—147; Mason Rudoph with a pair of 74s for 148; John Lotz with 72-82—154; and the tournament's lone amateur Bruce Ashworth who had 72-77-149.

Two courses, Paradise Valley and Sahara-Nevada Country Club, were used in the first two rounds but action for the last two is limited to Paradise.

He took his 76 the first day at Paradise when he had to use borrowed clubs because his caddy failed to show up with his bag.

Among the big money-winners who made the grade for the last two rounds were Dave Hill with a pair of 69s for 138; Don January, 66-74—140; Chi Chi Rodriguez 68-72—140; Billy Casper, 70-72—142.

Warriors' Late Rally Falls A Little Short

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The San Francisco Warriors won't be seeing the Chicago Bulls for awhile, but guess who's coming into town next? The defending National Basketball Association champion New York Knicks, that's who.

The Warriors got a look at the revamped Bulls Friday night and it wasn't fun. With Jerry Sloan peppering away for 22 points, 12 rebounds and alert defensive play, the Bulls edged San Francisco, 101-98.

The Warriors, who are now 3-5 and tied for fourth place in the Pacific Division, put on a spirited second-half rally but saw it fall a trifle short.

After Chicago built up leads up to 15 points and took a 58-47 halftime lead, the Warriors gamely battled back and at one point held a 92-91 lead in the fourth period.

However, Sloan ripped off four straight points to put it away for the Bulls, who are 5-2 in the Midwest Division.

For San Francisco, Jerry Lucas popped in 21 points and also had 22 rebounds. Jeff Mullins was the top Warrior scorer, with 23 points, with Bob Portman's adding 17.

Lamonica Hoping To Play

KANSAS CITY (UPI)—Earlier in the week, Daryle Lamonica promised he would be in the lineup when the Oakland Raiders meet the Kansas City Chiefs Saturday.

After a few days of touch-and-go situations, it appears the quarterback, the American Football Conference's top passer, will keep his pledge.

During workouts, the Raiders kept Lamonica on the sidelines and had veteran George Blanda, all 43 years of him, handling the "go" unit.

But on the final day of workouts in the Bay Area Fridoy, Lamonica, his ailing back and all, finally got on his togs and went through the paces with his teammates.

So, Madden will wait until just before game time before deciding who'll quarterback the crucial.

On the brighter side, all-pro center Jim Otto, who twisted a knee against the Steelers, went all-out in the final preparation.

Otto has never missed a regular season game in his professional career.

Oakland will be looking for revenge in the Kansas City encounter. Last season, after losing two regular-season games to the Raiders, Kansas City dumped Oakland in the AFL playoff and went on to the Super Bowl.

Word out of the Missouri city has it that the Chiefs are hurting, too. Defensive end Aaron Brown and tight end Fred Arbanas are doubtful performers.

If they're out, a name familiar to Raider fans and the brother of the Oakland player will get the starting nods.

Sharon Loses In Semis

ABERAVON, Wales (UPI) — San Rafael's Sharon Walsh, suffering from a heavy cold and lacking her usual zest, was beaten, 6-2, 6-1, Friday by Britain's Ann Jones in the women's singles semi-final of the Dewar Cup indoor tennis tournament.

The 18-year-old Miss Walsh was well below the form she has displayed throughout the series.

In Saturday's all-English final, Mrs. Jones meets Virginia Wade, who crushed Scotland's Winnie Shaw, 6-3, 6-0, in the other semi-final.

The men's singles final will be between British No. 1 Gerald Battrick and Vladimir Zednik of Czechoslovakia. Zednik downed David Lloyd of Britain, 6-2, 7-9, 6-2, and Battrick beat Paul Hutchins, 6-4, 6-3.

Devlin Takes Lead In Dunlop Golf Play

CANBERRA, Australia (UPI) —Bruce Devlin of Australia shot a four-under-par 68 today to hold a one-stroke lead after three rounds of the $28,000 Dunlop International golf tournament.

Devlin's performance left him ahead of Alistair Palmer of New Zealand and Britain's Guy Wolstenholme, tied at 210. Kel Nagle of Australia and Gary Player of South Africa were at 211 while Lee Trevino of the United States was alone at 212.

Four players including American Arnold Palmer were tied at 214 and British Star Tony Jacklin was one stroke further back.

Devlin, who said he drove the ball "fantastically well," picked up a birdie three on the 15th hole when he reached the green of the 485-yard hole with his drive and a four iron and dropped a 15-foot putt.

Nigrets Pride Wins Feature

SAN MATEO, Calif. (UPI)— Nigrets Pride, with apprentice Arthur Ochoa aboard, stepped to an easy one and one-half length victory Friday in the featured Hayward Purse at Bay Meadows.

Favored Against the Wind finished third in the field of seven three-year-olds after setting the pace to the top of the stretch.

SUNDAY IN KEZAR STADIUM

A Lot At Stake When 49ers Meet Packers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — There is more at stake in Sunday's Green Bay Packers-San Francisco 49ers game than pride or a personal passing duel between two old rivals.

"This could be the game that helps us turn the corner," said 49er coach Dick Nolan earlier in the week in trying to evaluate the Packers.

"Green Bay is a solid team, and like ours, they are in a tight race. That means we can expect them to hit us with everything they have, and pride has nothing to do with it."

Packers coach Phil Bengtson feels the same about the 49ers, for whom he served as an assistant coach for eight years.

"Their defense has improved and John Brodie is having a fine year," said Bengtson of the 49ers. "This game with them is certainly our biggest one this year to this point."

The 49ers, leading the National Conference's Pacific Division by a half game with a 4-1-1 record, are favored by 4½ points, the usual spread awarded home teams when clubs are about equal.

The Packers are 4-2 and third in the Central Division, but only a game behind co-leaders Minnesota and Detroit, who meet earlier Sunday. So, a Green Bay victory closes the gap on one of those two while a loss makes things considerably tougher.

Brodie, the National Conference's leading quarterback, renews an old rivalry with Bart Starr Sunday, provided Starr can play. The veteran Green Bay quarterback, honored a week ago by the hometown fans and President Nixon, has a sore right arm but more than likely will start.

Another old 49er friend, defensive tackle Kevin Hardy, also will play. Hardy was traded away by San Francisco earlier in the season and reportedly is chomping at the bit to "get even." He will play opposite Woody Peoples, who was one of his closer friends only a few weeks ago.

Center Ken Bowman shoulder and running back Travis Williams ankle are listed as doubtful for Green Bay. Replacing them in the event they can't play will be Malcolm Walker and Jim Grabowski.

Wide receiver Gene Washington will not play for the 49ers. Rookie Jim Riley or runing back Jimmy Thomas will fill in.

Both teams come to Sunday's tussle off winning performances.

Starr hit on eight of 16 passes for 129 yards and one TD in last week's 30-17 victory over Philadelphia.

Brodie completed twice as many passes for 234 yards and one TD as Bruce Gossett booted four fiel goals. Brodie's scoring toss covered 25 yards to rookie John Isenbarger, who then outran the Denver defense to make it a 61-yard play as San Francisco squeaked past the Broncos, 19-14.

Since the 49ers have gotten off to their best start in many years, ticket sales are improving, according to a club spokesman. The estimate is that as many as 50,000 and maybe even 55,000 will see Sunday's 1 o'clock game at Kezar Stadium, which has been a sort of jinx park for the Packers in recent years.

Green Bay has dropped three games and tied one in its last four in the ancient stadium, which is being used by the 49ers for the final season this year. The overall series record between the two clubs stands at 17-17-1.

The San Rafael Military Academy Cadets took it on the chin yesterday, losing, 23-6 to the California School for the Deaf in a Bay Counties League football game in Berkeley.

Primarily responsible for the Eagles' victory was running back Tom Marvel who scored all three of his team's touchdowns. After SRMA took an early lead on a 40-yard run by Jim Stevenson, Marvel hauled in a 60-yard pass from Tom Sandoval, and Sandoval ran for the conversion that put CSD ahead to stay.

Marvel's other touchdowns came in the second quarter on a 30-yard run, and in the last quarter on a 20-yard run.

TENTATIVE APPROVAL

All-Year Trout Fishing

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Year-round fishing for trout and salmon in California lakes and reservoirs has won the tentative approval of the State Fish and Game Commission.

The action was taken Friday on the recommendation of the State Fish and Game Department, which said the season change would "provide some additional recreation without harming the resource, since bag limits and weather conditions will limit the harvest."

Final approval is expected at the commission's meeting Dec. 3-4 in Los Angeles.

Counties deleted from the recommendation were Inyo, Mono and Alpine.

The recommendation also removed special limits and changed opening dates to Saturday in closed areas.

The state in the past few years experimented in the year-round fishing to determine whether such an action would have an adverse effect on trout and salmon resources.

Under the new regulation, the trout and salmon limits will be five trout or salmon in combination but not more than 10 pounds and one fish.

As for streams, the ones in Fresno, Imperial, Kings, Los Angeles, Madera, Mariposa, Merced, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Stanislaus, Tuolumne, Ventura, Kern and Tulare Counties except for the Kern River drainage above Democrat Dam will be open all year. The only restrictions will be in special areas.

Streams and rivers in Del Norte, Humboldt, Trinity, Mendocino, and Lake Counties will be open from May 29 through Nov. 15, with some exceptions. The limit will be 10 fish but not more than 10 pounds and one fish.

The commission also rejected a DFG recommendation that the north coast be open to scuba divers for abalone fishing.

An objection was raised by county supervisors and organized sportsmen's clubs, saying scuba divers would be detrimental to waders seeking the shellfish.

Trevino, who shot a 74 during the round to hold fourth place in the tournament, said he thought his ailment was "food poisoning."

"I've been sick all day," said Trevino. "I've had stomach cramps and I feel like I'm all bloated. My stomach is killing me."

Trevino said he thought some pineapple juice he drank early in the morning may have caused the ailment.

NBA ROUNDUP

Balance Is The Key To Bullets' Success

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Baltimore Bullets are demonstrating that balance is the key to success in the National Basketball Association.

The Bullets, led by Earl Monroe's 30 points and 27 by Westley Unseld, had six players in double figures Friday night as they rallied to beat the Philadelphia 76ers, 123-110. The victory helped the Bullets maintain a two-game lead over Cincinnati in the NBA's Central Division race.

The Bullets trailed by four points entering the fourth quarter but battled back to go ahead 94-93 on Fred Carter's basket with 9:54 left. A three-point play by Unseld and another basket by Carter put the game out of reach.

Jack Marin had 18 points for the Bullets while Kevin Loughery tossed in 14, Gus Johnson 11 and Carter 10. Archie Clark led the 76ers with 24.

In other NBA action Friday night, Boston beat Phoenix 127-112, Los Angeles ripped Buffalo 104-90, San Francisco lost to Chicago 101-98, Seattle defeated Portland 115-104 and Cincinnati trounced Cleveland 125-110.

John Havlicek and Steve Kuberski combined for eight straight points in the fourth quarter to lead Boston over the Suns. Phoenix drew to within two points with 2:48 remaining before Havlicek and Kuberski teamed to give the Celtics a 10-point lead with 49 seconds to go.

Havlicek had 33 points to lead Boston while Paul Silas paced the Suns with 23.

Wilt Chamberlain's 20-point performance led Los Angeles over Buffalo, the expansion Braves' fifth straight loss. The Lakers put the game out of reach by outscoring the Braves 35-16 in the second period. Don May led Buffalo with 22 points.

Player-coach Len Wilkens scored 35 points and rookie Pete Cross swept in 22 rebounds to power Seattle over Portland. Wilkens also had 10 rebounds and 10 assists.

Norm Van Lier had 20 points as Cincinnati handed the Winless Cavaliers their ninth straight loss. John Warren led Cleveland with 24.

Rancho Cotate Triumphs

Guard Steve Penney romped 77 yards with a third quarter interception for the winning touchdown as the Rancho Cotate High School Cougars of Rohnert Park earned a 20-7 homecoming victory over El Molino of Forestville last night in Petaluma.

The Cougars' first touchdown also was provided by the defense when 6-foot-4 tackle Frank Mattern pounced on a blocked punt in the Lions' end zone midway through the second quarter.

Late in that period El Molino's Wilbur Gray scored from four yards out and the Lions took the lead at halftime, 7-6.

Rancho Cotate's offensive unit contributed an insurance touchdown in the final seconds of the third quarter on a two yard plunge by Doug Poueu.

NFL ROUNDUP

Jets Could Use Babe Parilli Now

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Oakland Raiders and the New York Jets do not share the same view about 40-year-old quarterbacks, and that explains a lot about the records of the two teams this year.

The Raiders still have faith in 43-year-old George Blanda, not only as a place-kicker but as a field general, and he may be the starting quarterback Sunday when the Raiders take on the world champion Kansas City Chiefs in an important American Football Conference game.

Blanda may get the assginment because regular quarterback Daryle Lamonica is sidelined with a back injury but the Raiders wouldn't exactly be hurting with the aging veteran at the helm. Last week Blanda stepped in when Lamonica was injured in the first quarter and fired three touchdown passes-including bombs of 44 and 43 yards-to pace the Raiders to a 31-14 rout of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

While the Raiders are glad to have Blanda around, the Jets felt just the opposite with 40-year-old Babe Parilli this summer and they forced him into retirement. However the move might have been hasty.

Joe Namath, the No. 1 quarterback, was injured two weeks ago and may be out for the balance of the season and his backup, Al Woodall, hasn't shown that he can do the job.

The Jets blew a game to the Buffalo Bills last weekend and Woodall's inexperience was a contributing factor. Many experts felt that Parilli, with his 16 years of pro experience, could have beaten the Bills and tha with him directing the club Sunday the Jets might stand a chance of beaing their cross-town rivals, the Giants.

But Coach Weeb Ewbank said the Jets do not intend to reactivate Parilli. "We think that Woodall and Bob Davis are better than Parilli," says Ewbank. "I like Babe but his arm is gone and we didn't think he could help us any more."

In other Sunday games Minnesota is at Detroit, Green Bay at San Francisco, San Diego at Cleveland, Houston at St. Louis, Miami at Baltimore, Philadelphia at Dallas, Los Angeles at New Orleans, Washington at Denver, Buffalo at Boston and Chicago at Atlanta. Pittsburgh hosts Cincinnati in a Monday night game.

Redwood Frosh Triumph, 28-8

John Troppmann threw two touchdown passes to lead the Redwood High School freshman over Drake's frosh yesterday in football team to a 28-8 victory Larkspur.

Bob Adams was on the scoring end of both passes, one for 71 yards and the other for 28. The other Redwood touchdowns were scored on the ground, Jeff Vogel on a 65-yard scamper and Bill Edralin on a one-yard plunge.

Bing, Pistons Near Agreement

NEW YORK (UPI) — All-star Dave Bing is "99 per cent sure" of reaching a new agreement with the Detroit Pistons of the National Basketball Association, after he voids a previous contract signed with the Virginia Squires of the rival American Basketball Association.

"We're in the process of dealing with the Pistons and I'm 99 per cent sure we'll come to an agreement," Bing said from his New York hotel, where unbeaten Detroit is staying until its game tonight with the defending NBA champion New York Knicks.

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (UPI) —Rick Barry, who isn't doing much for his present team right now, is trying to do something for one of his former teams. Barry, who is on the injured list for the New York Nets, said he will fly to Miami next week to see if he can help salvage the basketball season for his alma mater, the University of Miami. A special study committee has recommended the school drop the sport and Barry is opposed to the proposal.

Petaluma Fumbles Game Away

The Petaluma High School Trojans, nursing a 3-0 lead with less than four minutes left in the game, fumbled on their own one-yard line and lost, 6-3 last night to the Santa Rosa High School Panthers in a North Bay League I football game in Santa Rosa.

The importance of a 29-yard second quarter field goal by Petaluma's Dan Cader was erased when Panther quarterback Drew Argue took immediate advantage of the horrible Trojan mistake by diving a single yard to paydirt and victory.

Petaluma outgained the Panthers in total yardage, 155 to 126, but was stopped in the second half with only two yards on the ground.

UCLA Rips Washington State, 54-9

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Sophomore backs Gary Campbell and Randy Tyler each scored three touchdowns Friday night as UCLA romped to an easy 54-9 Pacific 8 conference victory over Washington State.

The Cougars were held to a first quarter 48-yard field goal by Don Sweet until the final period. Then third string quarterback Gary Bergan threw a 31-yard touchdown pass to Ed Armstrong for the only Washington State touchdown.

Only the final UCLA touchdown came on a pass as reserve quarterback Jim Nader threw eight yards to Tyler with less than five minutes remaining.

Kent Grand Jury Report Contradicted

NEW YORK (UPI)—An FBI investigation into the killings of four students May 4 at Kent State University in Ohio contradicts a grand jury report that said National Guardsmen fired their weapons in a belief they were in danger, The New York Times said today.

A 35-page summary by the Justice Department of the FBI investigation said most of the guardsmen who fired did not say they had done so because they believed their lives were in danger, the Times reported.

"Rather, they generally simply state that they fired after they heard others fire or because, after the shooting began, they assumed an order to fire in the air had been given," The Times quoted the summary.

An Ohio state grand jury found on Oct. 16 that the guardsmen were not subject to criminal prosecution because they fired under the belief that otherwise they would be injured. The Jury, however, did indict 25 persons—students, former students and faculty members.

The Justice Department report said there is "some reason to believe that the claim by the National Guard that their lives were endangered by the students was fabricated subsequent to the event," according To The Times.

Marin Commute Snarl Letters Urging Cutting

More than 2,000 form letters have been received by Golden Gate Bridge District officials, urging them to choke off commuter traffic frim Marin.

The letters were clipped from a San Francisco newspaper advertisement placed by dress manufacturer Alvin Duskin.

The advertisement urged district directors to "oppose plans to accommodate the doubling of commuters" by restricting traffic, doubling tolls for cars with empty seats and limiting the number of cars allowed to cross the bridge. It proposed instead that most commuting be "done by free buses, free ferries, free-moving walkways and free bicycles."

The advertisement ran on Oct. 19, and was clipped and sent to the bridge by 2,319 persons, reported Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring.

Of this total, 1,623 were from San Francisco, 103 from Marin, 19 from Sonoma, 206 from the Peninsula, 324 from the East Bay and 44 from other areas of the state, Luehring said.

The board of directors did not comment on the letters.

Gromyko Apparently Clears Air In West German Visit

BONN (UPI)—With an apparent "shot in the arm" from Friday's visit by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, West Germany's ruling coalition today breathed easier in preparation for next month's crucial state elections.

Gromyko made a brief stopover in Frankfurt Friday for six hours of consultations with his West German counterpart, Walter Scheel.

Scheel told newsmen after the Russian's departure the Berlin question had dominated the talks, although the two diplomats also touched on the Soviet - German nonaggression pact, forthcoming Polish-German negotiations in Warsaw and the announcement Thursday of renewed high-level contacts between East and West Germany.

But both Scheel and Chancellor Willy Brandt also stressed the prestige value of Gromyko's stop —the first by a Soviet foreign minister since Nazi Germany was divided after World War II.

Scheel told a cheering rally of his Free Democratic party in Frankfurt Friday night, "up to now we have been able to speak of our own interests only with the three Western allies. Now we can speak with all four."

Brandt agreed. In a television interview he called it "an advantage" that the Bonn government now was able to deal directly with the Soviets "instead of through a third party."

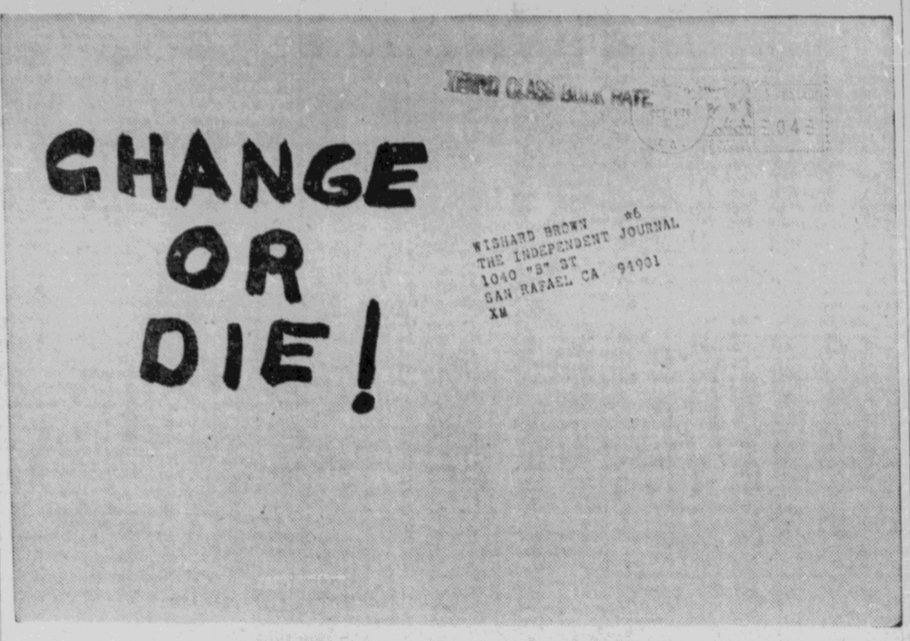

Scheel needed the boost provided by hosting such a high-level visitor. His Free Democrats recently have shown signs of a split which could doom the fragile coalition they form with Brandt's Social Democrats.

Observers believe the coalition could be further weakened if the Free Democrats fail to gain five per cent of the vote — and thus lose representation in the state parliament —in the Nov. 8 Hesse state election and a similar poll in Bavaria two weeks later.

That would appear to be the reason why Scheel chose Frankfurt, in the heart of Hesse, as the location of his headline-making talks with Gromyko, rather than the capital.

Scheel was optimistic when he met with newsmen Friday. He said, "I got the impression the Soviet government wants a positive result" on the Berlin question.

The Bonn government has demanded an improvement of the Berlin situation as a price for parliamentary ratification of the nonaggression treaty signed May 2.

Deer Stalking Quartet Handed Guilty Verdict

The newly retired district director of the U.S. Immigration Service, a retired San Rafael physician and two others were found guilty yesterday of stalking white deer on Point Reyes National Seashore lands after claiming they were looking for stray cows.

Fined $100 by Judge David R. Baty of West Marin Justice Court were Cecil W. Fullilove, 51, of Greenbrae, the retired director; Dr. Millard R. Ottinger, 77; realty broker Douglas G. Adams, 26, of San Rafael, and 31-year-old James R. Aman of Point Reyes Station.

Half of Aman's fine was suspended by the judge and execution of all sentences was delayed 10 days so the defendants could appeal the judgment to Marin Superior Court, according to court clerk Stella Philipscheck.

The defense claimed that Ottinger had a permit to use the land although he had sold it to the seashore; that the deer belonged to the doctor since he had brought them to the seashore; and that they were not hunting for deer, but for lost cattle, Mrs. Phillipscheck said.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Jerry Herman questioned the need for guns to catch stray cattle and read from the use permit which allows use of the land for cattle grazing only, she said.

Only Aman and Adams were present when Judge Baty found the four guilty in a trial without jury. Since Fullilove had resigned his immigration post effective today — in a move not connected with the trial — he had asked to be excused to complete last minute tasks, Mrs. Phillipscheck said.

The whereabouts of Ottinger were not unexplained when the two-day trial ended, she said.

The four were convicted under a state fish and game statute which prohibits carrying weapons on lands closed to hunting.

Mrs. Phillipscheck said the four were cited Aug. 16 after three were seen bearing rifles on Inverness Ridge.

The Soviet Press Ridicules U.S. Statement On Aircraft

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviets today ridiculed American arguments that violations of Soviet air space by U.S. aircraft are accidental. They said such flights originate from overseas bases "used for espionage and other hostile activities."

A commentary prepared by the official Tass news agency and printed in the military newspaper Red Star and other morning newspapers continued the theme of the Soviet protest note handed to an American embassy representative Monday.

The Soviet government Friday cleared two U.S. consular officers to return to Armenia and hold a second meeting Monday with the three U.S. Army officers whose plane crossed the border from Turkey and landed Oct. 21.

"The American bases situated close to the Soviet Union are being widely used for espionage and other hostile activities," the Tass commentary said.

"American propaganda is trying to picture this border violation and past violations as small accidental incidents not worthy of serious attention. Washington officials say, for example, that at least half of all these violations in the past three years were done by hunters for polar bears . . ."

"YES ON PROP. 11"

Dear Friend:

The California Chiropractic Association and the undersigned STRONGLY urge a "YES" vote on Prop. 11 on the November 3rd election.

The changes involved are needed and necessary for BETTER CONTROL OF ETHICS and CONTINUATION OF EDUCATION FOR RENEWAL OF LICENSE. As such there can be no valid opposition to a YES on Prop. 11.

Farm Prices Take 2 Per Cent Plunge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Farm prices plunged 2 per cent in the month ending Oct. 15 and parity — the price of the things farmers sell in comparison with the things they buy — fell to its lowest level since the depths of the Great Depression, it was reported yesterday.

The Agriculture Department monthly price report showed that the drop in average prices farmers got for their products fell largely because of lower prices for hogs, eggs, lettuce and grapefruit.

The report showed farm prices 1 per cent below the same time a year earlier while farm costs rose 0.5 per cent in the month to 5 per cent above a year earlier and a record high.

This combination of higher costs for equipment, fuel, fertilizers and help and lower prices for farm products brought the parity ratio of "fair earning power" down to 70 per cent — lowest point in 37 years.

Its previous low point was in December of 1933 when parity dropped to 67 per cent. The parity ratio had been 72 per cent on Sept. 15 and a year ago it was 73 per cent.

Don Paalberg, chief Agriculture Department economist, said the October decline was due to "particular cicumstances on some commodities and . . . not an indication of an overall softening in farm prices."

Grain prices, he noted, were above their levels of a year ago while hog prices were depressed because of heavy supplies and because farmers were getting rid of their hog herds in the wake of blight damage to this year's corn crop.

The decline in hog and other prices was partly offset by higher prices for cotton and milk, which hit record levels.

Farm prices have been fluctuating wildly in recent months. For the month ending Aug. 15, the department reported prices declined 3 per cent in the sharpest monthly slide in 20 years. But in the next 30 days, prices rebounded for a 2 per cent increase.

Parity is based on costs in the 1910-1914 period. The latest index of prices received by farmers fell from 281 per cent to 274 per cent of that base period while farm costs climbed from 392 per cent to a record 394 per cent.

Many economists in recent years have maintained that parity has lost much of its importance as a farm prosperity indicator because of changes in farm technology — primarily increases in production efficiency.

The parity ratio, remains, however, the most commonly used indicator of relative trends in farm prices and costs.

Usual Business On Voting Day

Marin County Civic Center and six city halls will remain open for business as usual on Election Day Tuesday. Offices in five municipalities will close.

The closings will be in Mill Valley, Tiburon, San Anselmo, Corte Madera and Ross.

In Southern Sonoma, Rohnert Park will close its city hall, while ones in Cotati and Petaluma will remain open.

Under a new law passed since the last general election, bars will remain open, as will stores and banks.

A trained political observer, Amant is shown here discussing the issues with the Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate. Always he must remain the reporter — objective, analytical and not above injecting a little humor into the interview.

UPI's George Skelton with Gov. Reagan
Says Skelton "If we staff one candidate we try to give equal coverage to his opponent. Needless to say, we also write the copy as straight as is humanly possible."

How an I-J/UPI rule helps you measure the candidates

Throughout California the I-J has a team of 8 UPI political reporters covering the key candidates for state and national office.

This is not random, hit-or-miss reporting. It is a carefully planned news operation which follows a basic rule: that each reporter assigned to a given candidate must stick with him in meetings, during speeches, on the plane, in the hotel, often in private.

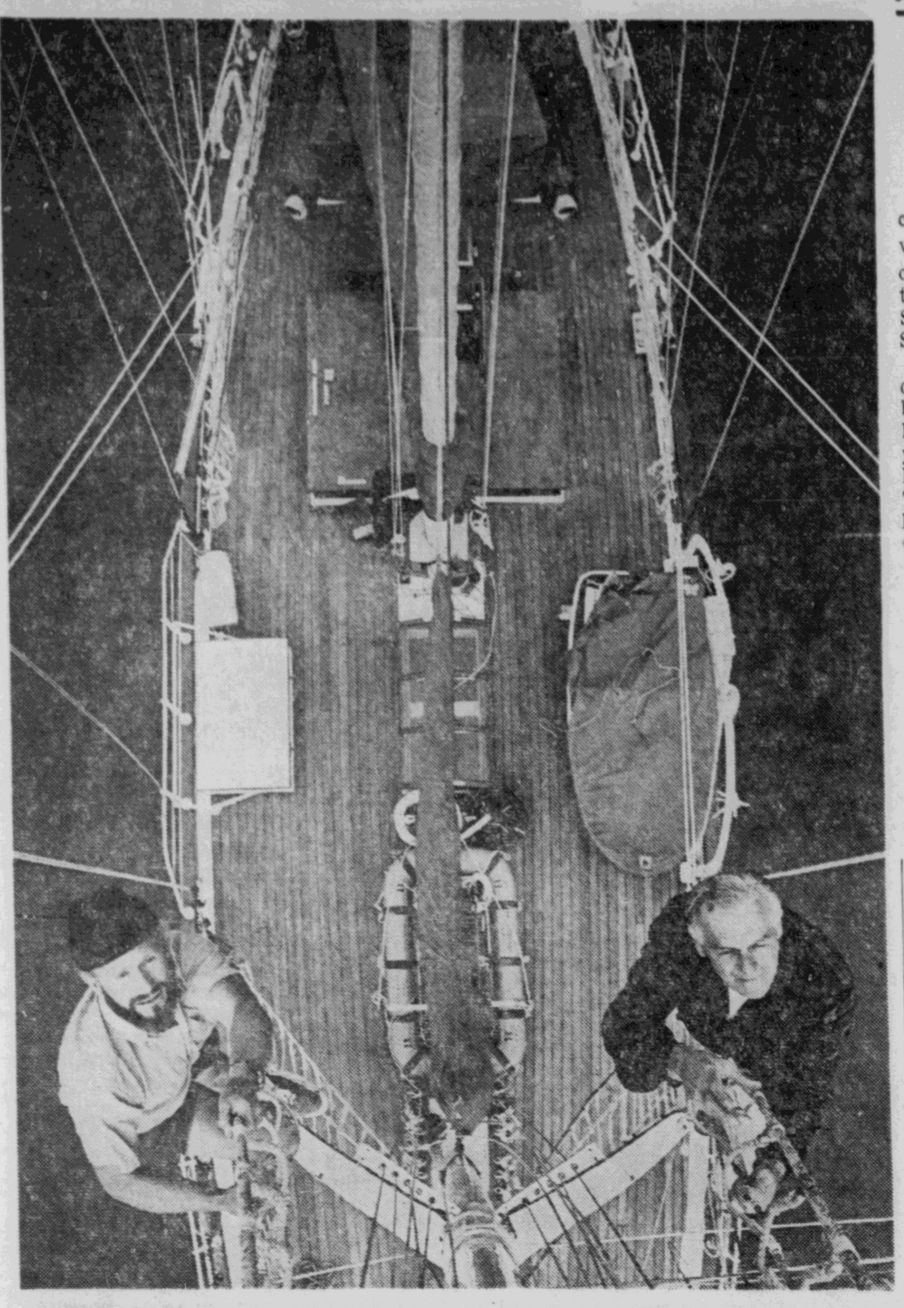

He must interview, question and report the candidate's views, his actions, his reception. He must preserve a healthy sense of doubt and a cool eye for accuracy. He must see through "political" gestures and report the man. And he may not let his personality get in the way of his pencil.

Result: the I-J, through UPI's trained observers, brings you new perspectives on the race for office. From our news stories and editorials you take your own measure of the candidates ... forming your own views for the decision you will make in private on November 3rd.

UPI A TEAM REPORT

AN ERA ENDS

50-Foot Brigantine Sails South To San Diego Port

An era ended in San Francisco Bay last night as the Rendezvous, a 50-foot brigantine and one of the last square riggers on the Pacific Coast, sailed out of Sausalito for her new port in San Diego.

The graceful old vessel — only one of its kind left in the bay area — had been base ind Berkeley for the last several years. Recently, her owner, Rollo Wheeler, sold her to Howard Thomas, a San Diego public relations man who plans to use the vessel as a charter craft.

"Everyone on the bay will miss her," her skipper, Capt. Bruce Martens said. For the Sausalito captain, who has sailed the Rendezvous "thoussands of miles" in the last five years, the voyage to deliver her to her new owner will be a nostalgic one — probably his last on the craft, unless she someday returns to the bay area.

Martens, who taught practical celestial navigation in Sausalito for 15 years, plans to use the three-day, 500-mile trip to Newport Beach (where she will be turned over to Thomas) as a kind of "final examination" for his latest class of students.

Martens, who for several years owned the Tiki, the vessel used in the television series "Adventures in Paradise," loves the South Pacific islands and said his best trip on the Rendezvous was a journey to Hawaii in 1965. "We had good winds all the way, got into warm weather and even stopped occasionally to swim," he recalled.

"A boat like this doesn't belong in a harbor for making short trips," Martens noted, wistfully surveying the vessel. "She should be in the South Seas as a cruise ship. Can't you picture this craft coming fullsail into a Polynesian Bay?"

Since the Rendezvous was built in Seattle in 1936, the colorful vessel — with its large square decorated sails — has become a familiar sight at West Coast ports from Canada to Mexico. Although she was constructed in Washington state ,the boat was brought to old Nunez shipyard in Sausalito to be rigged.

The Rendezvous sleeps 12 persons.

As Martens made final preparations to sail the Rendezvous for its last voyage together, it was clear he was not in a hurry for the trip to be over.

If his navigation students make a mistake and the ship ends up in Fiji, the captain will be just as happy, even though he will still have to fail them in the course. But the idea is appealing. "Wouldn't that be great," he said and his face lit up at the thought.

New FTC Chairman Offers False Advertising Remedy

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The new chairman of the Federal Trade Commission says the best remedy for false advertising may be to force offending companies to admit the deception in future ads.

"Where matters of health, nutrition or safety are concerned, this may emerge as a more effective remedy," Miles W. Kirkpatrick said in an interview.

Traditionally, the FTC orders only that the false advertisements stop, but under Kirkpatrick's leadership, the agency has already proposed such "reverse ads" in two cases.

In one, Coca-Cola is accused of making false nutritional claims for Hi-C, a canned beverage. In another, Standard Oil Co. of California is accused of falsely claiming that its Chevron gasoline reduces air pollution.

The FTC proposals are only preliminary steps, and any final determination could be years away because any final FTC ruling can be appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals and to the Supreme Court.

Under the FTC procedure, a company can agree to the FTC proposal without admitting guilt —as most companies have done when simply ordered to stop false advertising. Or, the companies can challenge the proposal and present their cases to an FTC hearing examiner, who makes a recommendation to the commission, which then issues a final ruling.

Kirkpatrick, who once chaired a commission that recommended either abolition or overhaul of the FTC, was sworn in as chairman Sept. 15, and since then the commission has taken several actions that previously would have seemed radical.

"I really think we give a big bang for a buck," he said.

Kirkpatrick says he welcomes strong consumer participation in advertising and fraud cases.

Jury Indicts Five On Murder Charges

MARTINEZ (UPI) — The Contra Costa Grand Jury returned murder indictments Thursday night against five suspects for the execution-type slayings of three persons at the Wild Idol Inn at Byron last Oct. 5.

Those indicted for murder, kidnaping, conspiracy, robbery and burglary were Billy D. Vaught, 28, Antioch; Todd Clair, 18, Antioch; James Dean, 24, Yuba City; Willie Jones, 22, Oakley, and Virgil Gunther, 23, Knightsen. Gunther was also charged as an ex-convict in possession of a gun.

All were held without bail.

The victims of the triple slaying were Robert A. Tracy, 65; his wife, Cecil May, 58, and Lloyd Young, 50, an assistant manager of an Antioch supermarket. Mr. and Mrs. Tracy were proprietors of the Wild Idol Inn.

The victims were discovered by sheriff's deputies behind the bar at the inn, all shot in the back of the head.

Vaught, Dean and Clair were held in the Contra Costa County Jail. Gunther and Jones were held in the San Joaquin County Jail where they were being held on charges of armed robbery and assault with a deadly weapon in the abortive holdup of a bar in Tracy.

Naming Of Steering Panel Likely

The Marin County Board of Education is expected to create a steering committee Monday to study building an environmental education center at Audubon Canyon Ranch.

The recommendation is on the agenda for the board's 8 p.m. meeting in the county schools office in Corte Madera.

Establishment of a nonprofit corporation in cooperation with the Audubon Society is proposed to build and operate the center on land owned by the society. The corporation also would seek donations and grants for the project, according to Marilyn Crowell of the county schools staff.

The trustees will be asked to approve payment of up to $1,200 to Kramer, Miller and Associates for consultant services on the project.

Byron Mauzy, acting deputy superintendent, will recommend that the board award a $102,568 contract to Page Construction Co. and Lloyd Hunter to construct an occupational training shop for handicapped minors. Ten bids were received for the job, ranging up to $127,265.

100 Pickets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About a hundred pickets gathered in front of the White House shortly before noon today to kick off an antiwar rally.

New Workshop Is Launched

A workshop on the meaning and experience of being a man has been started by the Family Therapy Institute of Marin.

The workshop, which will use a variety of techniques including Gestalt, sensory awareness and encounter, will meet each Wednesday from 7 to 9 p.m.

There is a fee for the workshop which will be led by social worker Charles R. Dillon and Armondo Maliano.

Alpine Club Plans Ecology Program In Mill Valley

Films, discussions and exhibits will highlight an ecology program by the California Alpine Club at noon Nov. 8 at the group's Mill Valley clubhouse, 730 Panoramic Highway.

The program, to benefit the Audubon Canyon Ranch in Stinson Beach, Nature Conservancy and other conservation causes, will begin with exhibits at the clubhouse. An ecology hike from the club lodge will begin at 2 p.m., followed at 7 p.m. by a speech and films.

Dwight Steele of Tiburon is scheduled to discuss saving San Francisco Bay and there will be two films on water conservation.

A similar program is planned for Nov. 7 in San Francisco.

Kettenhofen Best

TWO MARIN County men, Democrat William M. Bennett and Republican Ernest N. Kettenhofen, are competing for election as Third District member of the State Board of Equalization.

The winner will replace Democrat Paul Leake of Woodland, who is retiring after many years of effective service.

It has always seemed to The Press Democrat to be highly ridiculous that this strictly financial-management job should be a partisan rather than nonpartisan office, but that's the way the law reads.

The Press Democrat recommends Mr. Kettenhofen for the job. As a Marin County businessman who also operates a working farm in Lake County he has a dollars-and-cents interest and understanding of the high cost of taxes, and an appreciation of the problems peculiar to the Third District.

Mr. Bennett, on the other hand, is an attorney at law whose office is in San Francisco, which has its own member on the Board. As a Marin resident he is fully eligible to be elected from this district, but it seems to The Press Democrat that his opponent, whose own problems and interests are in the Third District, should be the one to represent us

EQUALLY important, as a farmer and as a businessman, Mr. Kettenhofen has first-hand experience with what California's lopsided tax structure, with its grass-roots emphasis on property taxes, is doing to farmers, to homeowners and to small business. His would be an expert voice in working to sensibly overhaul a tax structure that badly needs it.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL

Kettenhofen Has Ideas For Real Tax Equalization

There is an air of lethargic bureaucracy about the California State Board of Equalization's main office at 1020 N Street, Sacramento. We predict it will disappear in a hurry if Ernest N. Kettenhofen of San Anselmo wins election to that board on Nov. 3.

Kettenhofen is the Republican candidate for board member from the 25-county Third District, to succeed veteran Paul R. Leake of Woodland, who is retiring at the end of this year.

HE HAS SOME definite ideas about what should be done to make California taxation policies more equitable. He has been hammering at them in his campaign, which has taken him repeatedly to each of the 25 counties, stretching from San Francisco Bay and Sacramento to the Oregon line, which make up the Third District.

Here are some of the things Kettenhofen advocates, and for which he would seek legislation where necessary:

Tax relief through incentive credits.

Kettenhofen believes that those who make property improvements that reflect to the general good should not be penlaized for doing so by immediate tax hikes, but given a write-off as incentive to improve. This could be especially valuable in promoting environmental improvements, he notes.

Abolition or major revision of the inventory tax.

This tax is levied on inventory held by business firms each March. Kettenhofen calls it "the most unfair and inefficient tax now on the California statute books" and "a bonus to cheat." It results in warehousing in neighboring states to "clear out inventory" for the due date, he claims. It should either be abolished or based on average inventory throughout the year, he contends.

Revision of the Williamson Act.

This is the act that permits acreage to be placed in "agricultural preserve" for assessment unaffected by increased value through change in use of surrounding lands. In some counties, it has been used as a tax dodge by owners of small parcels of undeveloped land, contrary to its purpose. Kettenhofen would seek to enforce uniform application — a function of the board of equalization.

Uniform taxation of timber lands.

Some counties, contends Kettenhofen, are virtually forcing destruction of forests by taxing timber lands on the board footage of standing trees Others tax only that timber which is harvested — which Kettenhofen believes should be the uniform practice to encourage forest conservation. Again, uniform assessment falls within the jurisdiction of the board of equalization.

THESE ARE SOME specifics in "Kett's" campaign for the little-noticed state board that has wide powers over California taxation and assessment practices. As he proved while on the Marin County Board of Supervisor, "Kett" is a man who works hard for what he believes, so he can be depended on to do more than pay lip service to such reforms.

Running against Kettenhofen for the office is another Marinite, Democrat William M. Bennett of Kentfield. Bennett, a former California Public Utilities Commission member, is campaigning as a "friend of the consumer." But when it comes to specifics, he has proposed nothing comparable to Kettenhofen's platform.

We believe the people of Marin and the 24 other counties of the Third District will be best served by electing Ernest N. Kettenhofen to the board of equalization. And we think they will do it.

Kettenhofen Best Choice

After carefully considering the qualifications necessary for a member of the State Board of Equalization the publisher of this newspaper is convinced that Ernest Kettenhofen is the best-qualified to serve our county as a member of that most important body.

Now serving his third term as a member of the Board of Governors of our California Maritime Academy, of which he twice has been chairman, Mr. Kettenhofen has established himself as a successful businessman, rancher and property owner who knows what taxation is all about.

Campaigning as the spokesman for the taxpayer, he is able to draw on his vast experience and knowledge of the 25-county Third District which he seeks to represent when discussing taxes and tax reforms.

Ernest Kettenhofen knows the problems of the property owner, large and small, and the problems of government as well. He speaks for the taxpayer because he knows at first hand the growing burden he bears. He has the knowledge and know-how to do something about the tax burden.

Most importantly, Ernest Kettenhofen knows this area well, through his long association with the Maritime Academy, of which he is a prominent graduate, as well as his ownership of property in Lake County and his familiarity with Solano and Napa County and their tax problems.

Mr. Kettenhofen has devoted his life to public service, as a member of several boards and commissions, including the Board of Equalization in Marin County, county supervisor, Marin College Foundation president, co-chairman of the Committee for Adequate Shelter for All (CASA), hospital board director and chairman of a fund drive which raised $350,000 from private sources to help build the Mental Health Center at Marin General Hospital, and Northern California chairman for successful passage of the proposition which created tax incentives for the maintenance of open space.

His background establishes him as a proponent of economy and equality in government and tax administration. He proposes to seek tax relief through incentive programs. He believes that those who make property improvements which generally benefit the public should not be penalized by immediate tax increases, as is presently the case.

Mr. Kettenhofen would abolish or revise the annual inventory taxes what he calls "the most unfair and inefficient tax now on the California statute books."

At present the inventory tax results in millions of dollars on inventories being warehoused in other states—notably Nevada — to await the California due date. He believes if this tax is not abolished, at least it should be based on an average annual inventory.

He also advocates revision of tax regulations under the Williamson Act which permits some lands to be placed in "agricultural preserves" to guarantee uniform application of provisions of the law, which is a function of the State Board of Equalization.

For these and many other reasons, we believe Ernest Kettenhofen to be the best qualified candidate to succeed retiring Paul Leake as Member, Third District, State Board of Equalization. A man who gets things done, an experienced and successful businessman, a rancher and property owner and a proven public servant of highest caliber, Ernest Kettenhofen should be everyone's choice for the Board of Equalization.

Conservation Groups Ask Ban On Leaded Gasoline

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Sierra Club and two other conservation organizations asked the state air resources board yesterday to ban the sale of leaded gasoline by Jan. 1, 1973.

In a legal petition the groups also asked that the maximum level of lead emissions allowable from cars be set at zero by January 1971 and that the top level of lead concentrations in the atmosphere be set at 1.5 micrograms of lead per cubic meter of air.

"What we're interested in is the elimination of lead from the atmosphere," said attorney William Wigert Jr.

Wigert said a similar petition was filed recently with the federal government resulting in President Nixon's order earlier this week that government automobiles use only lead-free or low-lead gasoline.

Wigert told reporters that 50 per cent of the cars now on the road could run without leaded gasoline and that conversion of the rest would be a matter of simple mechanical adjustments.

Stanford Medical School pharmacologist Summer M. Kalman called lead in the atmosphere "a toxic element with no known beneficial effect for any animal."

He said lead in the atmosphere is absorbed in the lungs, causes red blood cells to shorten in life and seriously affects the health of children and persons with weak kidneys.

Representatives of the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth and the Environmental Defense Fund said they hoped the air resources board will institute recommended guidelines at its Nov. 9 hearing.

"If not, we might use the courts, Wigert said. "We may sue to force the board to follow up on its responsibilities."

Files For Nonprofit Corporation Status

SACRAMENTO — Ignacio Pacheco Branch 22, Sons In Retirement of San Rafael, has filed for nonprofit corporation status with the secretary of state's office.

Directors listed on the filing were Rankin A. Millard and Francis S. Rodgers of San Rafael and Edward Bauer of Novato.

One Picture In Composite Is Wrong

It showed a view of Corte Madera Creek looking south from the Lagunitas Road Bridge in Ross, and was mistakenly lifted from the I-J files. The photo which should have been in that spot showed an old view of the creek looking north from the pedestrian bridge at the College of Marin.

Flood control construction along the creek has not reached Lagunitas Bridge.

Differing Campaigns For Governor

By CARL INGRAM

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A luxury bus, complete with wet bar and shower, sped smoothly along a freeway in Orange County while inside Ronald Reagan glanced at notes for his next campaign speech.

The mellow voice of Frank Sinatra rolled softly from stereo tape deck speakers and filtered throughout the wood-panelel and deeply carpeted private coach.

Miles away, Jess Unruh's conventional campaign bus wound through a blue-collar, middle-class neighborhood in Downey and headed for a "special news even" where he would condemn rising property taxes.

COUNTRY and Western music from a Los Angeles station blared from the bus radio.

"Turn up the volume," Unruh called to the driver. "That's the best version of 'Danny Boy' that's ever been done."

Unruh, slumped in a rear seat, hummed a couple of bars and sung a couple—off-key.

Both men are running hard for governor. Their buses seem to reflect their campaigns.

Reagan's operates with the same apparent ease of an expensive, highly precision machine. It seldom falters. His campaign is expected to cost more than $2 million.

By contrast, Unruh's lacks the same precision but makes up for the loss with zeal and intensity. His campaign is expected to cost much less than Reagan's—probably around $1 million.

THE BUS was loaned to Reagan for the campaign by Jack Wrather, owner of the "Lassie" television show and the company that operates the Disneyland Hotel. Reagan calls the luxurious vehicle with its swivel chairs and telephone "Lassie's sandbox."

The Republican governor's campaign is handled by the public relations firm of Spencer-Roberts and Associates, the same group that managed his successful 1966 campaign.

Unruh is managing his own campaign. He also rents a normal bus.

Unruh, former speaker of the state Assembly, is running for his political life on a platform which depicts him as a "real" man as opposed to what he calls Reagan's "image" record.

HE PORTRAYS Reagan as the "puppet" of powerful business interests who he claims have corrupted" the Republican governor's administration by "big money" at the expense of the taxpayer.

At appearances on college campuses and fundraising affairs, Unruh charges that the governor's record and his own record fail to mesh. He asserts taxes have soared at record rates under Reagan while the economy has slumped dramatically.

"He's running the same campaign against me as he ran four years ago against Pat Brown," Unruh tells newsmen.

Reagan, on the other hand, seldom mentions Unruh by name. And when he does, it usually is within the context of a joke about when "Big Daddy" was the powerful speaker of the Assembly.

GOV. RONALD REAGAN
Seeks second term

JESS UNRUH
Uphill fight

AT CAMPAIGN stop after campaign stop, whether it's at a $100-per-plate Republican fund-raiser or at a street corner appearance in a San Joaquin Valley farm town, Reagan boasts of his record as governor.

He cites steps taken to fight environmental pollution, attempts to reform welfare and taxation and the measures he has employed to bring more economy and efficiency to state government.

Reagan campaigned as the "citizen-politician" against incumbent Edmund G. Brown in 1966. He still considers himself one if asked but doesn't volunteer the label at public appearances.

At a campaign stop in Visalia, Reagan was confronted by a hostile group of about 30 college-age youths who shouted insults and picketed him with such placards as "Reagan Still Wants a Bloodbath" and "Reagan Eats His Children."

He mounted a planter box and engaged them in a question and answer exchange that closely resembled a college debate punctuated with shouts and hostility.

REAGAN repeated to the youths his position on issues in almost the same words he uses at factory tours or at $75-a-person cocktail receptions.

After about 20 minutes of dialogue, Reagan had blunted many of the youths' hostile barbs. A couple even applauded as he climbed aboard his bus heavily guarded by about 10 personal security men and uniformed local police officers.

At San Fernando Valley State College, Unruh was booed by students when he called for the expulsion from the campus of students who engaged in violence. He received a standing ovation when he verbally chopped down a disrupter who hurled obscenities.

UNRUH, whose campaign style reflects a "no nonsense" attitude, warned an especially obnoxious heckler, "When I'm governor, I'm going to kick you off campus personally."

Both Reagan, 59, and Unruh, 43, appear in top physical shape—better than many aides half their age. Neither displays a trace of grey hair.

Unruh first was elected to the Assembly from Inglewood in 1954 and quickly rose to power. He was speaker for a record seven years but was dethroned in 1969 by Republican Robert Monagan when the GOP gained control.

He surrendered his Assembly seat to run for governor.

Reagan had never sought public office before 1966. He has said he intends to serve the full four-year term if re-elected but has refused to unequivocally commit himself to it, saying some unforeseen incident such as serious illness could prevent that.

Ricardo Romo, a political organizer, is the Peace and Freedom Party candidate for governor, and William K. Shearer, a publisher, is the American Independent Party candidate.

Senator, Incumbent For Lt. Governor

By DENNIS J. OPATRNY

Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke and his Democratic opponent, state Sen. Alfred E. Alquist, are running for California's version of the vice presidency—a job one heartbeat away from the governorship.

If the governor leaves the office for any reason, the lieutenant governor succeeds him. The last man to step up to the governor's office from the lieutenant governor's chair was Goodwin J. Knight, who in 1953 replaced Earl Warren when he was appointed U.S. chief justice.

The lieutenant governor is also acting governor when the chief executive is out of the state or country.

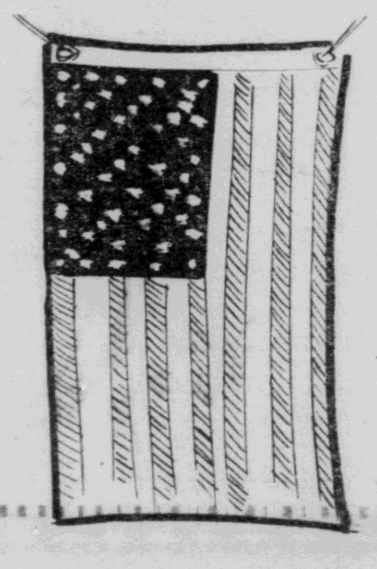

REPUBLICAN Reinecke was appointed to the job by Gov. Ronald Reagan to succeed Presidential Counselor Robert H. Finch, who resigned in January 1969 to become U.S. secretary of health, education and welfare.

Reinecke, a three-term congressman from the San Fernando Valley, has since spoken often for the Reagan administration especially on conservation matters and considers himself a "liaison" between the governor and the academic community.

Alquist, a two-term assemblyman and midway through his second four-year Senate term, won a four-way race for the Democratic lieutenant governor nomination in the June primary.

ONE OF Alquist's first meetings with the man he would challenge for the post came on the floor of the Senate shortly after Reinecke took office.

When Sen. Ralph C. Dills, D-Gardena, stood to seek recognition from the presiding officer Reinecke, the lieutenant governor called on Alquist instead. He mistook the two senators, both of whom have large shocks of wavy grey hair.

Both Reinecke, 46, and Alquist, 61, have been actively campaigning since the primary, but neither man has aimed much of his oratory toward the other. Instead, they take on the gubernatorial candidates of the opposition party.

FOR EXAMPLE, Reinecke recently criticized Democratic gubernatorial candidate Jess Unruh for attacking Republican millionaire and Reagan supporter Henry Salvatori.

The former mechanical engineer accused Unruh of a "new low" by standing in front of Salvatori's house to campaign which, he said, indicates "nothing is sacred (to Unruh) if political benefit can be reaped."

Alquist has assailed the governor for saying California has cut back its smog to 1950 levels.

The former railroad yard worker from San Jose said Reagan should "believe his eyes and nose rather than trust misleading information handed by political aides."

REINECKE has already said he would like to succeed Reagan as governor.

"I'd like to stay here for another four years and, on the assumption the governor doesn't run again, like to move into that seat," he said.

In addition to presiding over the Senate, the lieutenant governor is a University of California regent and a state college trustee.

He is also a member of the important state Lands Commission, which issues oil drilling leases on state property, and he sits on more than 20 other boards and commissions.

For his efforts the lieutenant governor is paid $25,000 a year, but under terms of legislation passed this year, his salary jumps to $35,000 begining January 1, 1971.

Merwyn H. Hemp, a mathematician, is the American Independent Party candidate for lieutenant governor, and John Haag, an organizer, is the Peace and Freedom Party candidate.

Clash For Secretary Of State

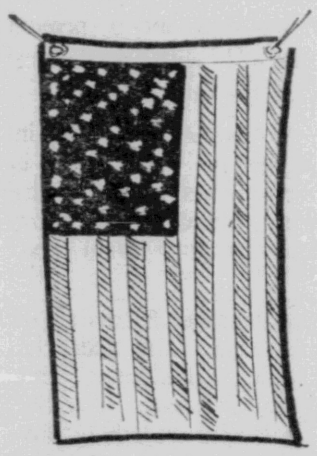

Brown Faces Black Atty. For Post

By DENNIS J. OPATRNY

Californians will elect a new secretary of state Tuesday and he will either be the son of a former governor or the first Negro ever nominated by a major party for statewide office.

Edmund G. Brown Jr. won the democratic nomination for secretary of state in his first bid for statewide office.

The 32-year-old bachelor son of the former governor won a seat two years ago on the Los Angeles Community College Board of Trustees, a nonpartisan post, but this is his first try at partisan politics.

EDMUND G. BROWN JR.
Son of ex-governor

JAMES M. FLOURNOY
Los Angeles attorney

Brown, a lawyer by profession, has received behind-the-scenes tutoring from his well-known father, but little actual campaigning help.

James Flournoy surprised many Republican leaders by winning the GOP nomination in the June primary over the widow of former Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan and prominent assemblyman, George Millias of Gilroy.

FLOURNOY, a black attorney, has been active for years in the Republican party, but has never held elective office. In 1968 he was national executive director of Afro-Americans for Nixon-Agnew.

A recent poll has indicated that name confusion may have contributed to his victory in the June primary. Sixty-two per cent of those polled were unsure whether Flournoy and state controller Houston I. Flournoy are separate persons.

Flournoy the controller has been a poplar GOP vote getter, first as a two-term assemblyman and then when he won his current office in 1966.

Young Brown, called Jerry by his friends, has conducted a vigorous race pledging election reform if he wins, including the requirement that candidates more fully disclose their campaign contributions.

BROWN also has urged the Federal Communications Commission to require television stations to provide free time to candidates, filed suit to end voting residency requirements (a provision an appeals court recently struck down) and proposed an initiative to abolish all residential property taxes.

Flournoy, who agrees his name is "very confusing" to some voters, is conducting a less active campaign and pins part of his future on Gov. Ronald Reagan.

"If the governor does well, then most of us (other Republicans) will come in," he said, while maintaining his drive lacks the financial support Brown apparently is receiving.

Reagan has challenged Democrats to vote for Flournoy saying, "Let's find out if our friends in the party really mean it when they talk about minorities."

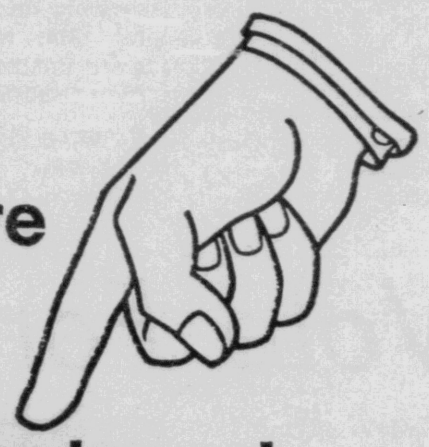

Asked how much he plans to spend in the general election, Flournoy replies: "I wish I knew. All we can get to spend in the best way I can put it."

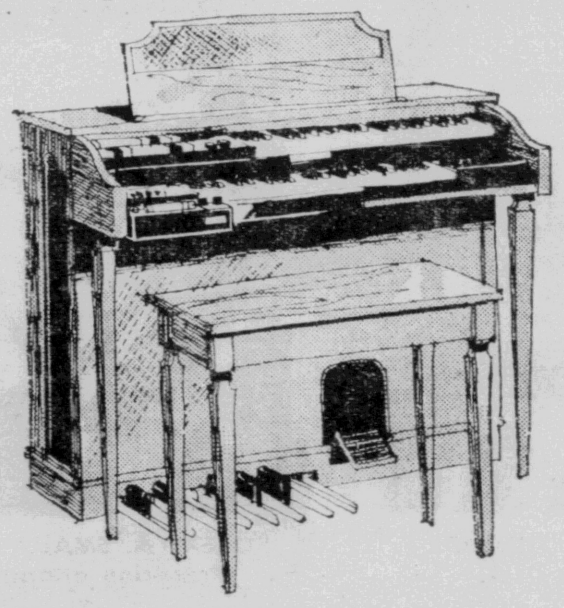

For the first time in nearly three decades the name Frank M. Jordan will not appear on the ballot.

Jordan died in March after a long illness. Reagan appointed his assistant, H. P. Sullivan as acting secretary of state. He did not choose to run for the office.

Israel Feuer, a community organizer, is the Peace and Freedom Party candidate for secretary of state and Thomas M. Goodloe Jr., an El Dorado County supervisor, is the American Independent Party candidate.

Races For Controller, Treasurer

By ROBERT P. LAURENCE

The first woman ever elected to statewide office in California hopes to win a second term Nov. 3, while Controller Houston I. Flournoy faces a challenge from a man who was once his colleague in the Assembly.

Treasurer Ivy Baker Priest and Flournoy, both Republicans, were elected to the state's top elected fiscal jobs four years ago in the landslide which put the GOP in control of every partisan statewide office but one.

MRS. PRIEST, 65, who was U.S. Treasurer under the Eisenhower administration, is being challenged for her job by Democrat Milton Gordon, 48, state real estate commissioner during the administration of former Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

Ronald Brooks Cameron, a former assemblyman and congressman from Whittier, is the Democratic candidate facing Flournoy, who has been rumored as a possible candidate for governor in 1974.

As treasurer, Mrs. Priest is in charge of investing temporarily idle state funds and also acts as the state's bond-selling agent.

A CAMPAIGN statement claims these investments have earned over $350 million in four years, "more than any state treasurer has ever earned in any state in U.S. history for the same period."

She says her "modern administrative and money management methods have attracted wide attention among government officials across the nation," drawing visits from 25 state and municipal treasurers or their representatives interested in improving their own operations.

Mrs. Priest has "handled and been responsible for more money than any woman in the history of the world," says a statement.

Gordon has said he wants to let a "little fresh air" into the office, calling Mrs. Priest a "charming, lovely woman" but an ineffective treasurer.

"As California's state treasurer, I would use 1970 management techniques in running the office," he says.

"I would use data processing; put an idle $38.4 million of state funds into interest-bearing accounts; and obtain a higher rate of interest on $1.75 billion in surplus state funds now earning a 6.02 per cent return."

GORDON has accused Mrs. Priest of asking California bankers to "kick back" funds into her campaign and called for an attorney general's investigation of her campaign fund solicitation practices. He said the state deposits $265 million a year in California banks.

Mrs. Priest called the charge "ridiculous." She said there was "no pressure" on bankers. "We may ask people for funds but they don't have to give ... it makes no difference in their deposits."

FLOURNOY, 41, faces a very unusual problem in his bid for a second term. He shares the same last name as another Republican candidate for statewide office, James L. Flournoy, who is running for secretary of state.

A private poll commissioned by Houston Flournoy, who is white, showed that only 22 per cent of the voters know he is not related to James, who is Negro. And 62 per cent aren't even sure whether they are separate persons.

Flournoy hopes to "win big" in November and retain his spot among the Republicans regarded as future possibilities for the governorship or Senate in 1974, but the name problem is causing him worries.

"There's a great deal of confusion and it concerns us," says an aide.

AS CONTROLLER, Flournoy is the state's top accountant, reporting on the financial operation and conditions of the state and local governments.

He says he has been "a leader in administrative and legislative efforts to achieve true tax reform aimed at greater equity for all taxpayers and balanced support of our public schools."

CAMERON, 42, served in the Assembly from 1959 to 1962. Flournoy was elected to the Assembly in 1960 and served until 1966, when he defeated former Controller—now Senator—Alan Cranston.

Cameron is a certified public accountant, and says the controller "should have a professional accounting background as well as a proven public record with a demonstrated social conscience."

"The people aren't told in clear language just what is going on in tax policy," he maintains, "and just how precarious is our fiscal posture."

He has accused Flournoy of keeping "secret" the fact the state is going "bankrupt," but the incumbent replied that the charge was "outlandish," "absurd," and that Cameron was "confused."

Jack Hampton is the Peace and Freedom Party candidate for treasurer, and C. T. Weber, a historian, is the Peace and Freedom Party candidate for controller. There are no American Independent Party candidates for either post.

Chance To Vote For Judge

A rare opportunity for voters to select a judge will be posed on Tuesday's ballot in the contest for Marin Municipal Court.

Judges generally leave office before their terms expire, making way for gubernatorial appointees to run as incumbents, which usually scares off possible candidates.

The runoff candidates are Robert A. Smallman of Kentfield and Ernest C. Zunino of Fairfax. They survived a June primary election in which 13 candidates appeared on the ballot.

The seat they are seeking is being vacated by Judge Alvin H. Goldstein, who chose not to seek reelection.

SMALLMAN, 47, is a former deputy district attorney and a former deputy county counsel, both in Marin. He has practiced law for 18 years.

He promises "to be a strong judge who is fair too; to stop delays, enforce the law, punish as well as rehabilitate the convicted, punish violations of probation, limit public defenders services to truly indigent, increase bail on repeated offenses and really discourage drug traffic and drunk driving."

Zunino, 38, a senior deputy district attorney for Marin, blames an increase in lawlessness on judges' laxity in sentencing, and asks that Marin again be "a fair and safe place to live." He says he would work to eliminate the backlog of cases by starting a night court.

Smallman opposes night court on the ground it would cost over $100,000, while a state study showed it would be used by only 7 per cent of defendants. Smallman instead favors scheduling cases to the daytime convenience of commuters.

ZUNINO declares that "if an individual is not held responsible for his misbehavior in the juvenile and municipal courts, he will undoubtedly progress to more serious charges in superior court. It is my intention to interrupt this progression while the offender may still be amenable to change. This would include a more restricted grant of probation and bail to repeated offenders."

The two differ over how tough a judge can be on his own. Smallman argues that all three municipal judges have to "work out a uniform system of justice," as any judge who took a solitary position "would have a very easy court calendar, for no one would take his cases before it — it has to be a matter of compromise."

Zunino argues that seeking compromise among the three judges would be "rubber stamp justice. It seems we've had enough of that up to now, and that system has failed."

Riles Challenges Boss For Top Job

Rafferty Controversial In World Of Education

By ROBERT P. LAURENCE

The battle for California's top elected educational job pits one of the state's most outspoken and controversial figures against a man relatively unknown to the public until this year.

Max Rafferty, the conservative state superintendent of public instruction, rode eight years ago from La Canada to Sacramento on a platform built on the 3Rs and opposition to "progressive education."

He is opposed in the Nov. 3 general election by Wilson Riles, 53, the compensatory education expert from the Louisiana backwoods who is on leave as Rafferty's deputy. Riles hopes to become the first Negro elected to statewide office in California.

RAFFERTY is also 53 years old and from Louisiana bu. after that the lives of the two men followed separate paths until u'timately they bo.h became professional educators and came together in the sta.e Department of Education.

Rafferty's family moved to Beverly Hills, where he graduated from high school. He went on to UCLA and later earned his doctorate degree in education administration at USC.

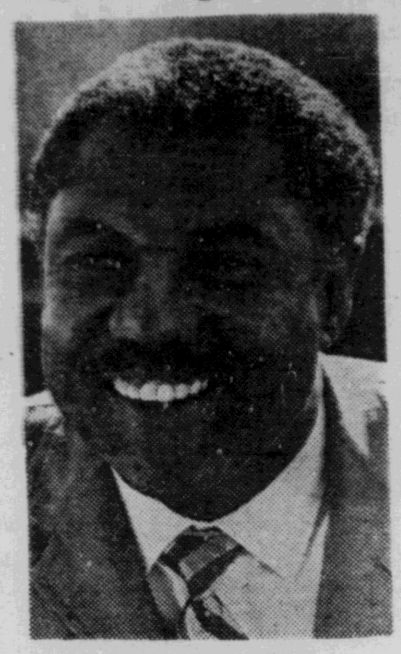

RILES' first schooling was obtained in a one-room schoolhouse in rural Louisiana "at the end of the Santa Fe Railroad line." He was orphaned at 13, and went to New Orleans, where he was "unofficially adopted" by a couple and worked his way through high school.

His foster parents later took him to Arizona, where he won his BA and MA degrees at the state college at Flagstaff.

He taught on a remote Apache Indian reservation, served in the Army Air Corps in World War II, then returned to Arizona as principal of an elementary school.

MAX RAFFERTY
Seeking third term

WILSON RILES
Deputy superintendent

The six-foot-four-inch Riles went to Los Angeles in 1954 as executive secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation and four years later joined the state Department of Education in Sacramento. A former member of a Nixon administration task force on urban education, he became deputy state superintendent last year and now seeks to replace his boss.

RAFFERTY taught in Southern California schools and was superintendent of the La Canada District before being elected state school chief. In 1966 he was re-elected by a landslide to the nonpartisan post.

Asked to list the greatest accomplishments of the Department of Education since he took office, Rafferty speaks of "the change in its philosophy from progressive education, life adjustment, to what we call "education in depth."

He also lists "the complete racial integration" of the department adding a student member to the state Board of Education, and "the department's role in helping the general rise in the standardized test scores of students throughout the state."

Rafferty considers the big issues in education to be drug abuse, compulsory busing and teacher strikes.

"We probably have the worst marijuana problem of any state," he says. He has appointed a drug abuse committee headed by entertainer Art Linkletter to make recommendations to the state board, and he favors more drug information courses in the classrooms.

HE IS an outspoken opponent of mandatory busing to achieve racial integration and also opposes teacher strikes as "illegal," adding a reform in the state's system of financing schools would "alleviate most of the reason for teacher s rikes."

"It is bad to compel parents to put kids in huge vans and bus them across roaring freeways, crowded slums, swarming industrial areas every day against their will, miles and miles away from their home, where parents cannot contact their teachers and teachers cannot contact their parents," says Rafferty.

For Riles, the biggest issue is Rafferty's "lack of leadership," which he says "has caused the greatest deterioration of the department in 20 years."

"I can't think of one constructive, creative program that he has put forth to assist schools. He has been able, through his blustery rhetoric, to blame the deterioration on everyone else," Riles says of his opponent.

"WE HAVE lost some of the top educational leadership," he maintains, adding that schools have "less state monies percentagewise" than eight years ago.

The "only bright spot" in the department is "the division of compensatory education which I headed," Riles says.

He argues that reading scores have not risen enough and that an easier test is being used this year showing students to be more improved than they really are.

On the subject of busing, Riles says the superintendent should not "be a party to mandating a method by which you achieve integration" and adds that local people should be assisted by the state department in finding solutions. He says that less than one-half of one per cent of California's 4.6 million schoolchildren are bused for integration purposes.

He favors drug education programs in the schools.

Regarding teacher strikes, Riles says Rafferty has failed to exert "the leadership that would result in improvement in the schools . . . You solve that problem by creating conditions that make strikes unnecessary."

HE HAS three main campaign themes—"to take the office out of politics," "bring the people together," and establish "accountability in the schools," including a new look at the tenure system.

The latest California shows Raffery leading by 16 percentage points, but Riles believes he is gaining.

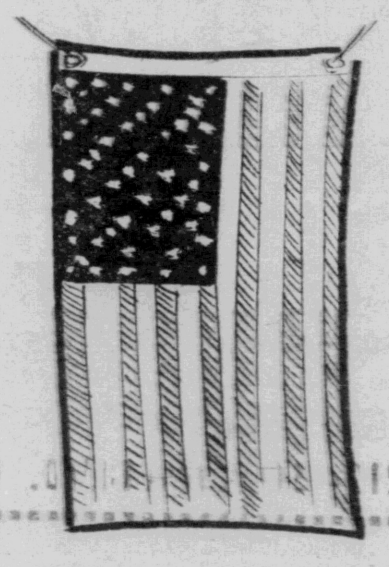

Rafferty's campaign manager, Robert Tuttle, says his candidate suffers from "apathy" among long-time conservative supporters who consider him a shoo-in. He says campaign contributions have been "absolutely terrible" and adds Rafferty will spend less than $100,000 in the general election with no television commercials.

Riles' campaign is being managed by Sanford Weiner, who also directed Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston's successful U.S. Senate campaign against Rafferty in 1968. Weiner places Riles' general election spending at about $200,000.

Four State Justices On Ballot

Voters will have a chance on Tuesday to say whether they want to keep four of the state's seven Supreme Court justices in office.

State law allows for no one to file for office against a justice, thus the balloting is limited to an affirmative vote.

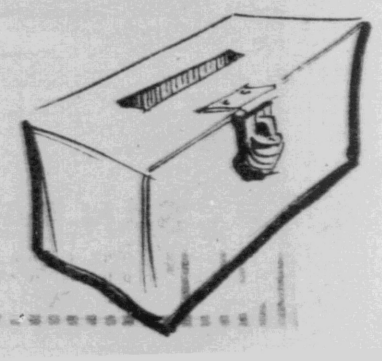

In theory, justices are appointed by the governor to 12-year terms, but most justices in fact are appointed to fill unexpired terms. But for reappointment, they must submit their names to the voters.

The same applies to the District Court of Appeal.

ON THE ballot are Chief Justice Donald R. Wright and associate justices Louis H. Burke, Raymond E. Peters and Raymond L. Sullivan.

Justices on the allot from the District Court of Appeal are John B. Molinari, Norman Elkington, James R. Agee, Murray Draper, Harold C. Brown, Thomas W. Caldecott, Preston Devine, Winslow Christian and Joseph A.Rattigan.

Tough Battle For Attorney General

By DENNIS J. OPATRNY

Two of California's top lawyers will submit their cases to the voters Tuesday to decide which will become the state's attorney general and No. 1 policeman.

Democrat Charles O'Brien and Republican Evelle Younger have extensively campaigned on the fact they are now important law enforcement officers.

O'Brien, 44, has been chief deputy state attorney general for the past nine years. Prior to that, he was executive secretary to former Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

Younger, 52, has served as Los Angeles County district attorney for six years, a job he was twice elected to after sitting as both a municipal and superior court judge.

The attorney general's office automatically makes its holder the chief law enforcement officer in California. He supervises district attorneys and sheriffs, acts as the state's legal adviser and represents it in legal battles.

A POST distinctly separated from the administration in Sacramento, the San Francisco-based attorney general operates more independently than other statewide officeholders.

The attorney general is also paid more than other consititutional officers, $42,000 beginning Jan. 1 compared to $35,000 for other statewide officers except for the $49,100 earned by the governor.

The post has also been used in recent history as stepping stones to the governorship by two men — Republican Earl Warren in 1942 and by Democrat Edmund G. Brown in 1958.

Younger has indicated if elected to succeed retiring democratic Atty. Gen. Thomas C. Lynch, he would be interested in making a run at the governor's office in 1974.

"If I'm elected attorney general, I'll do an outstanding job and then — and then only — will I consider what will happen four years from now," is the way the Nebraska-educated Younger put it.

O'BRIEN would also have to be considered a gubernatorial prospect four years hence should he win election to the top law enforcement job.

One of the controversies in their campaign involves distribution by Younger of money clips and cuff links with replicas of deputy district attorney badges.

O'Brien charged Younger with soliciting $250 from businessmen and lawyers for the replicas to maintain a "$150,000 political slush fund" during the past five years. He calls it "shakedown politics."

Younger denies there was anything illegal about his so-called "Ejy Club," which has been disbanded. He said between 600 and 700 of the clips and links were distributed since 1966

One of Younger's campaign pledges has been to present to the legislature a package of bills designed to speed up the

HE SAID in capital cases, such as murder, as many as 10 years will elapse between the setting of a trial date and final appeals.

O'Brien, a Harvard law school graduate, has called for tougher regulation of the overproduction of drugs and for more money and effort to protect policemen.

"I think we can do this without tearing up the bill of rights," he said.

Younger, a former Los Angeles County GOP Central Committee chairman in the 1950's, defeated three other Republican chaliengers in the June primary California court system. for the nomination. They were state Sens. John L. Harmer of Glendale, George Deukmejian of Long Beach and former State Human Relations Secretary Spencer Williams.

O'Brien won the full support of Lynch, who decided not to seek a second term.

Marguerite M. (Marge) Buckley, is the Peace and Freedom Party candidate, and there is no American Party candidate for the post.

SIXTH DISTRICT

William S. Mailliard, 53, has served in the House of Representatives since 1952, and is ranking GOP member of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee and the second senior GOP member of the Foreign Affairs Committee. He also is chairman of the California Republican Delegation in the House.

Mailliard was born in Marin and reared in San Francisco. He served in the Navy for seven years, and is a rear admiral in the Navy reserve.

MAILLIARD generally supports the Nixon administration's policies in Vietnam. Pessimistic about the peace negotiations, he has said, "We've got to stay with a very unpleasant situation which we probably should never have gotten into."

He cautions that cities should not expect a "big bonanza" in federal funds if the war ends, since the saving in military costs would not go far in meeting domestic needs.

Mailliard has proposed creation of a Golden Gate National Recreation Area using surplus Army forts in Marin and San Francisco.

RUSSELL R. MILLER, 33, was a press secretary to Rep. John V. Tunney, D-38th District, from 1966 to 1968, when he returned to his native San Francisco to become dean of boys at Stuart Hall School. He resigned in May to campaign fulltime.

Miller worked in the insurance business before joining Tunney's Washington staff.

He promises that, if elected, he will open neighborhood offices to keep in touch with his constituents.

Miller asserts that Mailliard is "tied" to the shipping industry, a strong supporter of the Cambodia invasion and Vietnam War and absent from Congress when key bills facing the nation and district were voted. Mailliard, according to Miller, "has grown out of touch with the citizens of his district and nation."

MILLER calls for complete withdrawal of troops from Vietnam "as quickly as safety and logistics will allow." He also proposes that flood control projects give at least as much weight to environmental considerations as to flood control.

FIRST DISTRICT

Don H. Clausen, 46, of Crescent City, serves on the House Public Works and Interior and Insular Affairs committees, and on eight subcommittees.

He runs on a record that stresses his role in acquisition of the Redwoods National Park and of the Point Reyes National Seashore.

CLAUSEN promises to represent all the people of his district and to work for solutions to inflation, total environment and domestic needs in the 1970s.

Dr. William M. Kortum, 43, a Sonoma County conservation leader, is a member of the Petaluma Board of Education, is president and founder of the Californians Organized to Acquire Access to State Tidelands, and was active in successful local campaigns to acquire Salt Point State Park and to locate a state college in the county.

Kortun describes himself as "a doer," adding that "like a lot of others, I am bothered by the lack of action on the major issues of the day. There is much that must be done in Congress — about inflation, high interest rates, wasteful military spending, the nationwide housing slump, the problems of local school districts and the plight of the fixed income citizen."

KORTUM, citing Clausen's claim that he was instrumental in getting approval of additional funds to complete acquisition of Point Reyes National Seashore, calls such a claim an "election year attempt to take credit for the hard work of other lawmakers and citizens groups."

Kortum also charges that Clausen's "inaction" on the acquisition for several years had cost taxpayers "$40 million in inflated land costs."

Kortum calls for an international conference for a political solution to the Vietnam War and setting of a fixed date to withdraw U. S. troops.

Vote For Water Bonds, Director

Voters in the Marin Municipal Water District will ballot Tuesday on two matters, an $11.5 million bond measure and a challenge for the seat of a 24-year veteran member of the board of directors.

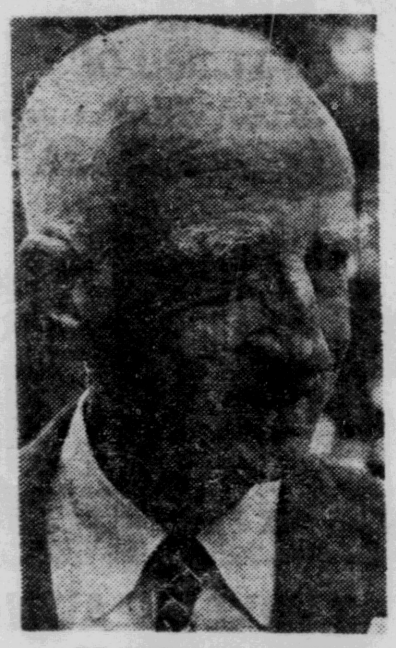

The bond issue, Measure H on the ballot, would finance the first three years of a 10-year improvement program as well as the first stage of a project to bring Russian River water to Marin.

Passage requires a two-thirds favorable vote.

The bonds are to be repaid from revenue from water charges, not from property taxes, according to district directors.

NEW FACILITIES would include a large pipeline from Novato to Hamilton Air Force Base, a reservoir in the Corte Madera area, pumping plants and piping, improved water distribution for fire protection, modernizing the San Geronimo Water Treatment Plant and other new equipment and installations.

It also includes $250,000 for maintenance and improvement of trails, picnic areas, and water and sanitary facilities.

DR. LEO L. STANLEY
Incumbent

RAY W. FOREAKER
Engineer

The argument for the measure states it "will provide the water service, fire protection and part of the future water supply we must have."

The district's general manager, Wiliam R. Seeger, says that consumption of water now has passed what he calls the "safe yield" level, and that two years of abnormally low rainfall could put the district in trouble.

No argument was submitted against the measure for inclusion in the county voter's pamphlet.

IN THE contest for director in District 1, incumbent Dr. Leo L. Stanley, 84, of Fairfax, is challenged by engineer Ray W. Foreaker, Jr., 43, of Santa Venetia. Two other candidates were eliminated in the June primary election.

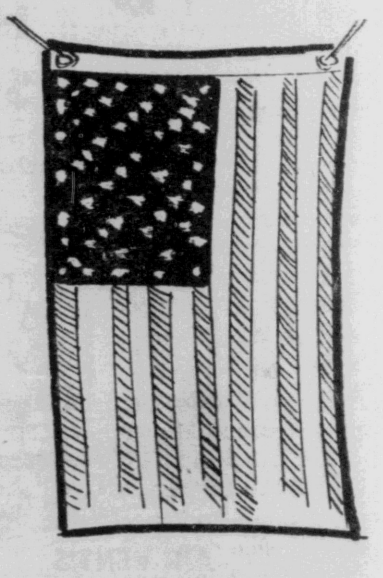

Stanley was chief surgeon at San Quentin Prison from 1913 until retiring to private practice in 1951. He stresses his long experience on the board and his familiarity with the district.

He says he thinks it is important to have a medical doctor on the board because of sanitation issues. He describes himself as a "common sense conservationist" who knows the "ecology of the district watershed as well as anyone."

FOREAKER, a San Rafael civil engineer, has served as a consultant to water districts on planning and designing water systems. He is Tiburon's city engineer on a consulting basis and a partner in the firm of Copple & Foreaker.

He is chairman of the Marin County Aviation Commission and the Marin County Board of Appeals.

Foreaker says that if elected he would like to get involved particularly with problems of sanitation in Southern Marin. He says the board needs a "younger, more aggresive" membership to meet modern problems, and that the district's watershed lands are public property and should be used to the greatest benefit.

Three In Race For State Senate

The race for the state Senate has been the local contest that drew the most interest this election year, and most voters will choose Tuesday between Republican Peter H. Behr of Mill Valley and Democrat Michael R. Peevey of San Rafael.

A third candidate is Esther Anne Smart of Larkspur, nominee of the American Independent Pary.

The district includes Marin, Napa and most of Solano counties.

THE THREE are seeking the seat being vacated by Sen. John F. McCarthy, R-San Rafael, who did not seek reelection after 20 years.

Behr survived a bruising primary contest against three other Republican candidates, while Peevey and Smart were unopposed in their primary elections.

Behr, 55, an attorney, long has been a leader in Marin's many conservation battles, and sparked the Save Our Seashore campaign that helped win additional federal funds to complete acquisition of Point Reyes National Seashore. He also led a citizens' campaign last year to strengthen the Bay Conservation and Development Commission.

Behr served as a Mill Valley city councilman for four years and as a county supervisor for seven years before stepping down in 1968 to start his campaign for the 1970 Senate race.

"It is the urgency of the environmental crisis, above all else, that prompts my candidacy," Behr said when he declared his candidacy.

BEHR promises a broad legislative program, if elected, including a ban on all phosphates from detergents, early construction of a freeway from Sears Point to Vallejo, and new laws to protect bicyclists.

Behr and Peevey both oppose the Peripheral Canal of the State Water Project, citing it as a threat to the bay.

Peevey, 32, is coordinator of community programs at the University of California's Institure of Industrial Relations in Berkeley. He formerly was director of research for the California State Federation of Labor, and before that was a manpower specialist with the Labor Department in Washington, D.C.

He first made local news three years ago when he led a group of citizens in a successful protest against plans for a second deck on the Golden Gate Bridge. He also is a director of the Sausalito-based Association of California Consumers.

PEEVEY favors payroll withholding of income taxes and "ending the infamous oil depletion allowance and closing the capital gains loophole," steps he says would raise more than 400 million dollars which could be used for state aid to local school districts.

Peevey also calls for slowing down new government programs "until the old ones have proved themselves under close scrutiny."

MRS. SMART, 57, states that "half the students in college don't belong there," and calls for earmarking a percentage of federal income taxes for schools "before it reaches Washington.

She favors limiting property taxes to 1 per cent of assessed valuation, saying property tax exemptions passed by the Legislature to date "are just sops." Cutbacks in state services and overlapping services, she says, are the only road to tax relief.

As for her stand on conservation, Mrs. Smart said, "I was an organic gardener long before the word 'ecology' hit the press."

She also favors construction of a bridge or tube from Tiburon to San Francisco via Angel Island.

Bagley, Forest, Bernd In Assembly Race

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, seeking reelection to a sixth two-year term in Tuesday's election, is challenged by Democratic nominee Joseph A. Forest and by Glenn A. Bernd, nominee of the American Independent Party.

The Seventh Assembly District covers Marin and Sonoma south of Santa Rosa.

Bagley, 42, of Sleepy Hollow, is an attorney practicing in San Rafael.

As chairman of the Assembly Revenue and Taxation Committee, he authored Gov. Ronald Reagan's property tax relief package during the past legislative session. It lost in the Senate by one vote, but Bagley predicts it will pass next year.

BAGLEY also chairs the Committee on Statewide Information Policy and Joint Committee on National Tax Policy, and is a member of the Assembly Ways and Means Committee and of the Select Committee on the Administration of Justice. He also is a member of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights' California Advisory Committee.

Last year, Bagley was named by the Capitol press corps as the "most effective assemblyman of the year."

Bagley says that "the challenge of the 1970s will be to create a better atmosphere in which people can live."

In the Legislature, he long has been an advocate of open meetings by public bodies and of assuring public access to public records. This year, he won passage of bills expanding public rights in both fields.

He also passed bills prohibiting oil and gas leases in San Francisco Bay and on the coast from Oregon to Monterey County for the next five years.

FOREST, 37, of Novato, is Marin's senior deputy county counsel. He formerly was in private law practice in San Rafael.

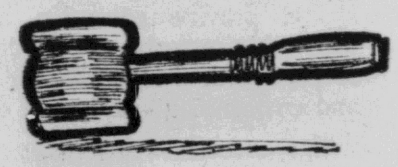

He says that the major campaign issues are protection of the ocean coast and of tidal areas of the bay, clean air and water, and development of a balanced transportation system.

Forest suggests that local agencies join in a regional association to solve their mutual environmental problems, and favors mandatory replanting of trees in logging operations, revising drug laws to improve medical and psychological treatment of addicts, and lowering the voting age in California to 18.

He also favors "repeal of special tax benefits for favored industries" and amendment of the state Constitution to eliminate its requirement that two thirds of the Legislature approve increases in taxes for banks and insurance companies.

BERND, 34, a former resident of San Rafael, lives in Sebastopol, where he owns a health food store and health club.

He says he believes "in the two-party system, but we really haven't had that for 25 years." Bernd opposed witholding state income taxes, favored by both Bagley and Forest.

WILLIAM T. BAGLEY
Republican incumbent

JOSEPH A. FOREST
Democratic challenger

GLENN A. BERND
Opposes Welfare

He also opposes income taxes, welfare programs and regional government, and favors "rugged individualism, a strict interpretation of the U.S. Constitution and new concepts in government to stop tax increases and end the creation of more socialist bureaucracy."

MARIN CLEANERS Phone 454-4792 — Member N.I.D. of San Rafael, Bel Aire & Fairfax

"Why Don't They Dye Leather So It Won't Bleed?"

They can, but it's probably cheaper not to. The National Institute of Drycleaning recently reported a manufacturer who sent a leather-trimmed coat to their laboratory for testing. N.I.D. found the leather trim would bleed in any drycleaning formula. They informed the manufacturer that the coat could not be drycleaned without hazardous results. Never-theless, the coat was placed on the market. As a result several coats were drycleaned. The leather trim bled into the fabric with a stain which cannot be removed.

This fault is the manufacturer's. It is instances like this that cause a drycleaner to refuse to handle leather-trimmed garments or to accept them for cleaning only at the owner's risk.

School Votes In Fairfax, Ross

Voters in the Fairfax and Ross elementary school districts will ballot Tuesday for new trustees, one in each district to replace trustees who resigned last summer before their terms expired.

In Fairfax, seven candidates are competing for the seat vacated by Priscilla C. Gray, and in Ross, two candidates are running for the seat vacated by L.G. Maclise.

FAIRFAX

Marilyn J. Birks, housewife; Stanley W. little, utility rate engineer; Harry Murphy, advertising executive; David R. Seyler, policeman; Paris B. Simmons, teacher; Thomas A. Truchan, teacher and textbook writer, and Joann Ruth Walla, cytotechnologist.

Mrs. Birks, 39, is a high school graduate. She and her husband, Robert, have four children. She has lived in Marin for 15 years.

SHE SAYS she would like to see the district "kept as one of the better in Marin. We do need to get back to a better grounding in the 'three Rs.' Also a more firm statement of rules, so the children know where they stand rather than reading between the lines."

Little, 39, attended San Rafael High School and the College of Marin, and was graduated from San Francisco State College. He and his wife, Mary, have six children. He has lived in Marin for 24 years.

Little ran unsuccessfully for the Fairfax City Council in 1966 and 1968, and is a former chairman of the Fairfax Parks and Recreation Commission.

LITTLE SAYS that "beyond providing the best possible education, the school system in Fairfax must provide the leadership in the community by instilling good citizenship and morale in the kids, with the resultant lessening of juvenile problems."

Simmons, 49, was graduated from San Francisco State College. A bachelor, he has lived in Marin for four years. He was an unsuccessful candidate for district trustee in 1969.

He teaches eighth grade in a Daly City public school, and has 24 years experience teaching all elementary grades. He has published three elementary textbooks, and developed a method of teaching spelling that is widely used.

SIMMONS favors "a 'quality education' for every child within the confines of the tax monies received. Excellence in teaching, not salaries without results. Representation of all electorate, not only those with children in the public schools of Fairfax. Results, not excuses for reading scores. Fiscal and monetary responsibility to the taxpayers of the district."

TRUCHAN, 31, was graduated from University of California at Santa Barbara. He and his wife, Barbara, have one child. He has lived in Marin for four years.

He is chairman of the social science department at San Rafael High School, and is coauthoring a world history textbook. He also is a professional string bass player, and performed with the Oakland Symphony from 1966 to 1969.

Truchan says he in general agreement with the district's educational policies, but feels there should be "a greater degree of community involvement" in their formulation. He also favors expansion of the teacher aide program and "continued exploration of new and exciting teacher materials and techniques.

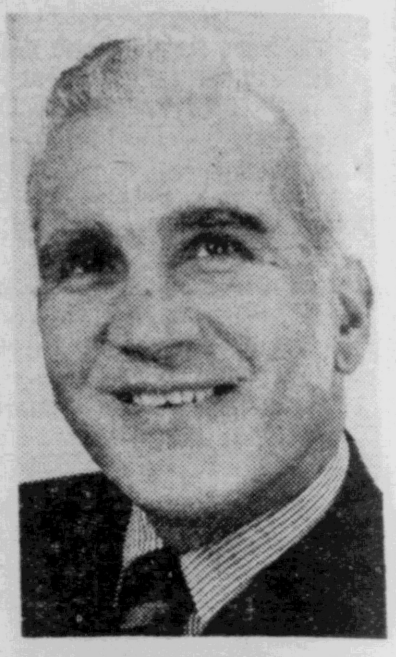

Murphy, Seyler and Mrs. Walla did not respond to I-J requests for information on their candidacies.

ROSS CANDIDATES

JOHN W. LARSON
Attorney

DR. JUSTIN L. WILLIAMS
Physician

ROSS

The candidates in Ross are John W. Larson, lawyer, and Dr. Justin L. Williams, physician. A third candidate, Jerrol L. Flood, withdrew, and his name will not appear on the ballot.

Larson, 35, was graduated from Stanford University and Stanford Law School, where he edited the Stanford Law Review. He and his wife, Pamela, have one child. He has resided in Marin for eight years.

He practices in San Francisco.

LARSON says that "the responsibility for the serious problems of our times soon will be with our children. They will be able to meet the challenges ahead only with an education which stresses excellence — excellence primarily in the fundamental subjects. Financial resources are limited. Thus we must always ask whether we are getting the most from our educational dollars."

Williams, 39, was graduated from Stanford University and Stanford Medical School. He and his wife, Margaret, have three children. He has resided in Marin for eight years.

He is the director of a medical corporation in San Francisco.

He was a member of the Ross School District's finance study committee for the past two years.

WILLIAMS says that "our school should provide the broadest possible education, with emphasis on basic learning skills, consistent with the financial ability of a single school district with an almost exclusively residential tax base. The school should provide education and leadership to teach the children to cope with the serious moral and environmental crises of our time."

Murphy, Tunney In Senate Faceoff

By DENNIS J. OPATRNY

The see-saw campaign between Sen. George Murphy and Rep. John V. Tunney is occupying center stage in California's fall political drama.

The Republican incumbent and Democratic challenger are locked in a tight race and rivaling the gubernatorial campaign for voter attention.

The 68-year-old Murphy seeks re-election to a second six-year term, but has met a fierce obstacle in the 36-year-old Tunney. The latest poll gives Tunney a two percentage point edge.

But Murphy, a former actor who ran for public office the first time in 1964 and defeated Pierre Salinger for the Senate seat, insists he'll retain his job by at least a 200,000 vote margin.

GEORGE MURPHY

REP. JOHN V. TUNNEY
Challenger

ROBERT SCHEER
Peace and Freedom

TUNNEY, the boyish looking son of former world heavyweight champion Gene Tunney, exhibits the same optimism about winning but adds "It won't be easy."

Both President Nixon and Gov. Ronald Reagan have taken an intense interest in fellow Republican Murphy's close race and have offered their assistance.

Reagan, confident his own re-election battle with Democrat Jess Unruh is fairly secure, is helping other GOP candidates, particularly his old Hollywood friend George Murphy, by making joint campaign appearances with him and stumping for him on radio and television.

THE PRESIDENT also plans to stump his native state for Murphy, who backs the President's Vietnam war policy and most of his domestic programs.

Nixon has already dispatched his son-in-law David Eisenhower, to assist Murphy, along with several cabinet-level officials.

Tunney, on the other hand, has had little apparent help from the National Democratic Party and has organized a separate drive from Unruh's campaign.

Although he endorses the former Assembly speaker in his race with Reagan, the two men seldom cross political paths or appear together.

Ironically, both Murphy and Tunney were born in the same state — Connecticut — attended the same college—Yale—and came to California as young men—Tunney at age 26 and Murphy in his early 30s.

But that's where the similarity ends.

FOR EXAMPLE, Tunney wants the President to set a specific date when all American troops will be withdrawn from Vietnam. Murphy supports the "Vietnamization" and gradual withdrawal policy announced by Nixon.

Tunney also has occasionally resurrected during the campaign the fact Murphy formerly was on a $20,000 retainer from the Technicolor Corp., used the firm's credit card and had his rent paid by the company. He acted as its consultant.

But the Senator says no conflict of interest was involved and he has since resigned from the post.

MURPHY also began the campaign with the handicap of his voice, which remains raspy following the 1966 throat surgery for cancer.

But doctors have given Murphy a clean bill of health and he uses electronic voice amplification equipment whenever possible to get across his message.

Tunney, who campaigned in the primary election with mildly long hair and a New England accent in his voice, has lost both for the general election showdown.

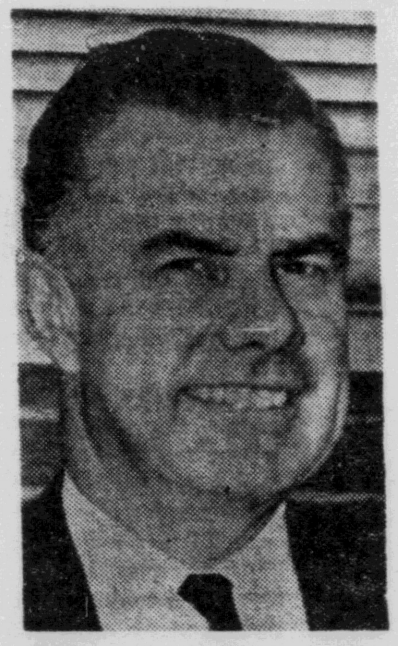

Robert Scheer is the Peace and Freedom Party candidate for the U. S. Senate and Charles C. Ripley, an engineer, is the American Independent Party candidate.

Two Marin Men Battle For State Board Of Equalization

Two Marin men, both veterans of public service, face one another Tuesday for the State Board of Equalization seat being vacated after 18 years by Paul R. Leake.

The two are Republican Ernest N. Kettenhofen of San Anselmo and Democrat William M. Bennett of Kentfield. Kettenhofen, 53 is a former Marin County supervisor. Bennett, 52, is a former member of the state Public Utilities Commission and a former state deputy attorney general.

Kettenhofen is listed on the ballot as a rancher-businessman. He has businesses in Marin, a ranch in Lake County, and operates recreational property in Placer County. Bennett is on the ballot as an attorney and professor of law at Hastings College of Law.

ERNEST N. KETTENHOFEN
Former supervisor

WILLIAM M. BENNETT
Ex-PUC commissioner

THE FOUR elected members of the board, which birddogs the equalization of the valuation of taxable property throughout the state, are paid $25,000 a year The third district seat being sought by Kettenhofen and Bennett includes 25 Northern California counties.

Leake, a Woodland newspaper publisher, did not seek reelection.

Each candidate was asked by the League of Women Voters of California to outline his proposals to improve equity in property tax administration. Here, in part, are their responses:

KETTENHOFEN — "I am opposed to special interests tax benefits unless in the general public interest . . . I would insist that uniform ratios be established and maintained throughout the state. I would work with the county assessors to make certain that residents and businesses were treated equally and fairly — and would work to streamline and improve for the benefits of the taxpayer, the appeals methods of tax protests."

BENNETT—"The large corporate taxpayers — the public utilities, the railroads, the banks, the oil and gas companies as well as others are favored as to tax status. Most of the historic exceptions such as oil depletion allowances, depreciation for tax purposes and other tax write-offs not available to the individual property owners must be repealed or modified so as to tax large corporate interests radically."

Kettenhofen also has advocated tax relief through incentive credits, abolition or major revision of the inventory tax, uniform application of the "agricultural preserve" law, and uniform taxation of timber lands from county to county.

Teresa E. Mortara, a housewife, is the American Independent Party candidate for the board. There is no Peace and Freedom Party candidate.

BALLOT WRAPUP

Record Voter Turnout Seen

The climax of the 1970 election year will come on Tuesday when voters in Marin join millions across the state at the polls.

A record count of 85,000 ballots in Marin was predicted by county elections officer Peter C. Meyer.

The total registration, itself a record, was 102,003 for the general election, including 47,876 Republicans and 46,649 Democrats. Total county population was 204,046.

The polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

THE BALLOT in Marin lists a total of 75 candidates and 29 measures. The candidates are seeking seats from governor to local special district governing boards. The measures range from a $250 million statewide bond measure to one in West Marin for $250,000.

In Southern Sonoma, the ballot also lists contested races for county supervisor, sheriff and assessor.

Sixteen different ballot forms were required in Marin because of the various district elections and political parties.

The order in which candidates are listed on the ballot may surprise voters who notice that some candidates for minor parties are listed before those of the major parties. This happens because the state Election Code rotates the order by Assembly district. In local contests, incumbents appear first, followed by other candidates in alphabetical order.

Write-in candidates will be counted only if the write-in candidate filed a declaration of his candidacy with each county clerk where he wanted his write-in votes to be counted. He also had to pay the regular filing fee for that office. Both the filing and the fee were due five days before the election.

Peace Measure Controversial

The most controversial of the local measures on Tuesday's ballot is Measure A, which calls for total withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Southeast Asia by next June 30.

The measure was put on the ballot with a unanimous vote by the Marin County Board of Supervisors. Several supervisors stressed that while they personally did not endorse the measure, they favored letting the voters ballot on it.

It reads:

"We the people of Marin County, California, hereby request the President and the Congress of the United States to begin immediately the total withdrawal of all United States military forces from Southeast Asia and to complete such total withdrawal no later than June 30, 1971."

PROPONENTS of the measure argue that it "seeks to provide the moral support for the President and Congress to extricate us from our military involvement in Indochina," and that "for the same reasons that it was wrong to get in, it is morally, economically and militarily intolerable to reamin."

They also argue that "we must have the wisdom and courage to admit our mistake and withdraw . . . Let us prove that this great might (of the U.S.) is matched by moral awareness and reason."

OPPONENTS argue that the referendum should be colored "red," claiming that "the Communists control or dominate the organizations and committees that comprise the 'peace' movement."

They also argue the measure's purpose was "to divide and polarize the American people and promote the hopelessness-inevitability concept that there is no hope in opposing communism as it is inevitable that they will achieve world victory.

"Unilateral withdrawal of our forces is a betrayal of the men have fought and died there," they declare, concluding, "Let's stop helping America's Marxist enemies!"

The argument for the measure was submitted for the voter's pamphlet by the Committee for the Peace Referendum. The opposition arguemnt was by the Committee to Stop Helping America's Marxist Enemies (SHAME).

A simple majority vote is needed to pass the measure.

LOCAL MEASURES

Novato Has Bond Measure, San Anselmo Tripleheader

Voters in San Anselmo, Novato, Point Reyes Station and Inverness will ballot Tuesday on local measures.

San Anselmo has three, each requiring a majority to pass. They are:

MEASURE E — Authorizes a special two-year property tax of nine cents per $100 assessed valuation, or $6.21 a year applied to a $30,000 home, to buy a $52,000 fire engine.

Proponents argue the new engine would replace an undependable one 22 years old, and that without new equipment, the city's fire rating may drop, thus increasing home fire insurance costs.

Opponents argue the engine should be bought with existing funds by eliminating unnecessary expenditures.

MEASURE F — Also authorizes a two-year special property tax rate of nine cents to raise $52,000 to repair and upgrade various city streets.

Proponents argue that existing tax revenue is inadequate to keep up city streets, and that without needed repair several streets will deteriorate to the point they will need far more costly rebuilding.

Opponents say elimination of frills in the city budget would provide enough money for needed street repairs.

Both measures E and F were put on the ballot because the city had a general fund rate of $1.70 per $100 assessed valuation — 18 cents above the legal limit before street repairs and the engine were cut.

MEASURE G — Reduces the maximum salary of a city councilman from $75 to $50 a month. Salaries are set by state law, and must go to a voter of the people to be changed.

Proponents argue that the $50 maximum would be sufficient to offset most actual expenses incurred by a councilman, and would save the city up to $1,500 a year.

Opponents argue that the saving would be only a drop in the bucket in comparison with the city's total budget, that a councilman can return his salary to the city if he wants, and that $75 is little enough for the time a councilman should give his city job.

MEASURE D in Novato is a $3,250,000 bond issue for various street improvements over the next five years. The maximum tax rate to repay the 20-year bonds would be 48 cents per $100 asesssed valuation.

The proposed bond issue has been defeated twice before by the voters. Passage requires a two-thirds vote.

A city report found that in the last decade street mileage increased 85 per cent, the number of vehicles increased 175 per cent, and accidents increased 260 per cent.

No arguments for or against the measure were submitted in the county voter's pamphlet.

Appeearing on a separate ballot is a $250,000 bond issue by the North Marin County Water District in a special improvement district in Point Reyes Station and Inverness. It would be for acquiring and improving existing water systems of private companies in the two communities.

Heavy Load Of S

Twenty Decisions Including Two Bo

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

California voters again will turn legislators on Tuesday when they wrestle with 20 ballot measures — an inheritance from the progressive movement early this century.

Sixteen of the propositions are constitutional amendments put on the ballot by the Legislature because the Constitution requires voter approval to make any changes in its tangled web. The other four are legislative initiatives requiring voter approval.

All require majority approval to pass, including $310 million in two bond measures.

VIRTUALLY all controversy over this year's measures focused on Proposition 18. It would permit a county or city, after approval by a majority of the voters, to divert up to 25 per cent of its share of state highway user tax revenue to rapid transit and air pollution control.

The Constitution has reserved these funds for highway purposes for the past 32 years, a reservation zealously defended by highway interests as needed to keep up with highway needs.

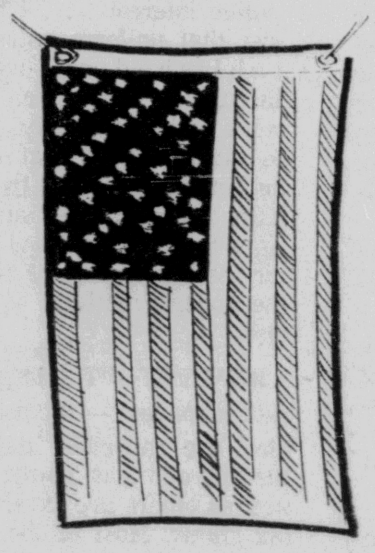

The author of the measure, Sen. James R. Mills, D-San Diego, estimates that Marin could get $873,000 a year for transit under the measure, and that this would finance $10,476,000 in transit bonds. With federal matching funds, Marin could finance $31.4 million in transit bonds, according to Mills.

BOND advisers, however, have questioned whether such financing would be self-defeating by cutting into its own source of revenue by luring people from cars to transit systems.

Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post suggested the 25 per cent limit on diversion as the maximum that could be diverted in any county without adversely affecting the state highway construction program outside that county. The diverted funds could be used to construct, but not operate, mass transit systems.

Proponents of the measure argue that voters most of whom are drivers, should be allowed to decide what kind of local transportation system they want to buy with their share of highway taxes. Mass transit will be needed to deal with air pollution in some urban areas, they argue. Gov. Ronald Reagan endorsed the proposition.

OPPONENTS argue that few persons will give up their cars to ride transit systems, that tax revenues already are inadequate to meet highway needs, and that the cost of transit should be borne separately by each community.

Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, "father of California freeways," argues that "one of several unpleasant alternatives" if the proposition passes will be that highways and local roads "will be allowed to deteriorate with resulting accidents, fatalities and congestion."

Opponents also argue that freeways are a better investment because they satisfy more "person trips" than transit, and serve truck traffic, unlike transit.

The opponents also argue that the amendment will open the door to further diversion of highway funds for other purposes, too.

THE OTHER proposition attracting considerable interest, but no formal opposition, is Proposition 1, a $250 million bond measure to make grants and loans to aid local communities upgrade their sewage treatment. If approved, it could generate $1 billion over the next five years if matched by a possible $550 million in federal funds. The net financial effect would be to halve the local share of such projects from 70 to 20 per cent.

Failure of the proposition still would leave local communities, including several in Marin, facing toughening demands by the state to clean up their waste water.

Assemblyman Carley V. Porter, D-Compton, author of the proposition, asserts it "will prevent water pollution in California and at the same time provide assistance in relieving the heavy burden the property owner must carry." He notes that "the chief cause of water pollution is the discharge of inadequately treated sewage and other wastes from homes and industries to our rivers and streams."

The other statewide ballot propositions are:

PROPOSITION 2 — Gives the state Supreme Court exclusive authority to replace temporarily disabled state officials who are absent after three months because of illness.

Current law limits the court's jurisdiction in such cases to the governor. The proposition was triggered by the incapacity last year of the late secretary of state, Frank M. Jordan. It would apply also to the lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, treasurer, controller and superintendent of public instruction.

Proponents argue that the amendment is needed to close a loophole in the law on replacing disabled elected state officials.

Opponents argue the amendment could lead to harassment or unjustified removal of elected officials. They also claim that civil service and appointive deputies have kept their offices functioning in the absence of an elected official.

PROPOSITION 3 — Requires the governor to submit his budget to the Legislature within the first 10 days of each session, rather than within the first 30 days, starting with the 1972 session. It also requires the Legislature to adopt a budget by June 15. There is no deadline now.

Proponents argue that the earlier submission would give needed time for study of the budget by the Legislature, and that enactment by June 15 would assure the state authority to pay its bills as of July 1, the beginning of the fiscal year. The Legislature for the past two years has failed to pass a budget by July 1, thus creating considerable fiscal confusion.

Opponents argue that an incoming governor would have difficulty submitting a budget so soon, and that the change would not be worth the extra little time it would give the Legislature to consider budgets.

Proposition 3 provides also that only it will become operative if both it and Proposition 4 passes. Proposition 16, however, apparently would make operative the one receiving the most votes if both passed.

PROPOSITION 4 — Permits the Legislature to earmark school appropriations before passage of the state budget.

Under current law, the state school appropriations bill cannot be acted upon by the Legislature until after the budget bill, thus local school districts trying to plan their budgets in June for the new fiscal year do not know how much state aid they will get until July or August.

Proponents argue the amendment would let local school districts know how much they will receive in state aid before completing their budgets. It also would tell the public how much property tax revenue will be needed to finance local school budgets.

Opponents argue that all state needs, not schools alone, should be considered together so that a total budget can be passed at one time.

PROPOSITION 4 conflicts with Proposition 3, and if both passed, only 3 would become operative, unless Proposition 16 passed.

PROPOSITION 5 — Requires that meetings of the Board of Regents of the University of California be conducted in public.

The regents, despite an opinion by the legislative counsel to the contrary, claim that state antisecret meeting laws do not apply to their meetings.

Proponents argue that all other public agencies in the state, with the notable exception of the Legislature, are required to conduct their meetings in public, and the regents have no reason for special treatment. The people have a right to know how the regents' decisions, which affect their taxes and children's education, are made, proponents argue.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, long a proponent of such an amendment, wrote the argument for its passage that appeared with sample ballots.

OPPONENTS argue that the regents should not be subject to the open meeting laws because they are not elected, thus do not have the power to adopt ordinances or levy taxes. Besides, opponents claim, most meetings of the regents already are open to the public. Opposition also stems from a fear that disruptions will occur if the public is guaranteed the right to attend meetings.

Opponents also criticize the numerous exceptions included in the amendment that would allow closed meetings by the reagents for a host of purposes.

PROPOSITION 6 — Permits the Teacher's Retirement Fund to invest in common and preferred stock and shares in mutual funds.

Proponents argue that all other public pension and retirement funds can make such investments, and that such investments reduce retirement system costs and provide some protection against inflation. The fund was excluded from a 1966 measure that allowed such investment.

There is no formal opposition to the proposition.

PROPOSITION 7 — Makes the speaker of the Assembly automatically a voting member of the Board of Trustees of the California State Colleges.

The speaker now attends meetings of the trustees, but can not vote. He also is a member of the Board of Regents of the University of California, and has a vote on that board. The lieutenant governor, the ranking member of the Senate, is a voting member of both.

Proponents argue that the amendment is needed to give the speaker the same voting power as the lieutenant governor.

Opponents argue that elected officials should be removed from both boards, not added to them, so as to remove the boards from partisan wrangling.

PROPOSITION 8 — Authorizes a second deputy superintendent of public instruction exempt from civil service.

Proponents argue this measure would help improve administration of state education, and that the elected superintendent should have people of his choice to work with rather than persons from a previous superintendent's administration.

Opponents argue it would not provide sufficient control over appointees' qualifications, and would compound existing conflicts between an appointed board and an elected superintendent.

PROPOSITION 9 — Permits the four-year appointment of county superintendents of education, rather than their election, in counties where voters approve appointment.

Proponents argue superintendents should not be politicians, and that an appointed superintendent could be fired instead of waiting up to four years for an election.

Opponents argue that superintendents can be recalled by the voters, and that voters should retain their right to have a say in public education through the ballot box.

PROPOSITION 10 — Extends the exemption from interest rate limits to loans of $100,000 or more to any corporation or partnership.

Proponents argue that nationwide inflation and tight money markets have driven interest rates higher than the 10 per cent permitted by the state Constitution, thus making it difficult for the state's housing and construction industries to borrow needed funds from out-of-state sources.

Opponents argue that construction costs will rise with higher interest rates, and that the measure only caters to the needs of big corporations.

PROPOSITION 11 — Authorizes the state Board of Chiropractic Examiners to set education requirements for license renewal.

Proponents argue that the amendment is needed to allow the board to deal with new discoveries and techniques since it was set up in 1922. New standards of professional standards are needed to protect the public, proponents say, noting that the board's powers now are very limited.

Opponents argue that the measure singles out chiropractors unfairly for mandatory continuing education. The present act provides means to make any needed changes, they say.

PROPOSITION 12 — Shifts the responsibility for setting the salaries of county supervisors from the Legislature to the boards of supervisors themselves, subject to a local referendum.

Propoents argue it would allow local salaries, borne by local taxpayers, to be set locally by ordinance with a referendum. The Legislature now routinely rubber stamps requests for pay increases to county supervisors, they say.

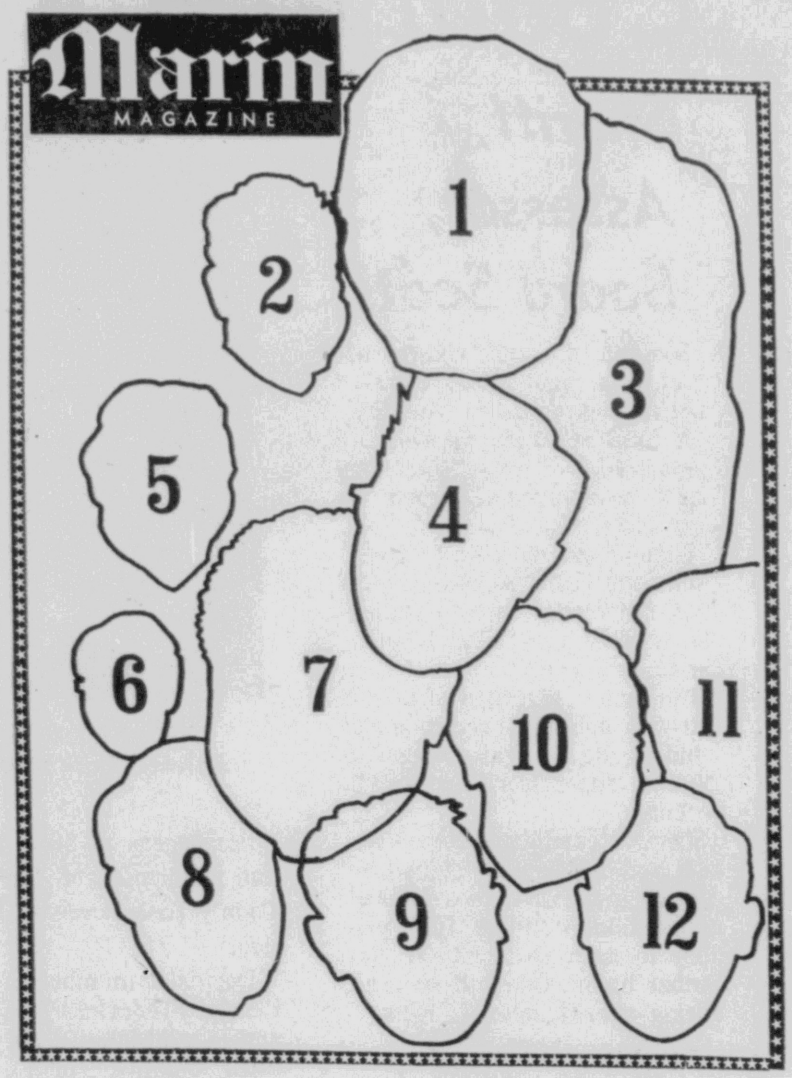

Opponents argue that supervisors would be tempted to set their own salaries too high, that the high cost of a referendum made it an ineffective control, and that the present system has worked well.

PROPOSITION 13 — Doubles to $10,000 the amount of property exempt from taxation

College District Tax, Bond Vote

Marin Junior College District will have two measures on the ballot Tuesday, Measure B, an operating tax, and Measure C, a bond measure.

Measure B would increase the operating tax rate in the district by 25 cents, from 35 to 60 cents per $100 assessed valuation. A 35-cent capital improvement tax, however, would be canceled, resulting in a net reduction next July of 10 cents, from 70 to 60 cents.

A simple majority is needed to pass Measure B.

Measure C would provide for $16,920,000 in bonds, at least half pledged by the district to build the first phase of development on its Novato site for at least 2,200 students. The rest would be used to complete the Kentfield campus.

THE BONDS would be repaid by 1999 by a maximum property tax rate of 17 cents per $100 assessed valuation, or $12.75 a year on a $30,000 home.

Passage of Measure C requires a two-thirds favorable vote.

Arguments for both measures cite the growth of the college's enrollment by more than 300 per cent since 1962, from 1,276 to 4,737 students. Enrollment is expected to reach 7,469 by 1978.

Measure B would provide needed operating funds, without which the educational plant and program will deteriorate seriously, according to its proponents. The operating tax of 35 cents has not changed since 1937. The district's assessed valuation doubled in the last decade, while enrollment quadrupled.

THE ARGUMENT for Measure C states that the Kentfield campus cannot be expanded beyond its planned capacity of 5,000 students because of limited acreage, the high cost of adjacent land and traffic patterns. The argument also notes that state law allows the district to levy taxes for pay-as-you-build construction without voter approval, but that this could raise the cost to taxpayers as high as $1 per $100 assessed valuation in heavy construction years.

No arguments against either measure were submitted for inclusion in the county voter's pamphlet.

During his six years on the city council, Joerger has opposed membership in the Association of Bay Area Governments because he feels it threatens local control.

He feels that ABAG may someday have the power to tax and control local planning. He feels that special districts already operating can take care of regional problems such as air and water pollution.

He is a graduate of the Santa Rosa Junior College law enforcement program and has taken courses offered by the division of forestry.

Thibodeau has also attended 10 training sessions provided by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

COMALLI, 50, assistant Sonoma county assessor, is seeking the top spot for the first time.

Comalli has been employed in the Sonoma County assessor's office for 19 years and has served the last four years as assistant to retiring Assessor Robert J. McMullen.

A Sonoma county native, Comalli received his bachelor of science agriculture degree majoring in forestry at Washington State College.

He completed many courses in real estate appraisals and is an instructor for the University of California extention staff in advanced real estate appraisal.

Comalli co-authored the "Handbook of the appraisal of timber property" and is chairman of the technical group for the Timber Advisory Committee for the State Association of Assessors.

CRANE, 46, a leader of the Sonoma County Irate Taxpayers Association, is a candidate for assessor.

A lifelong Sonoma County resident, he attended Santa Rosa Junior College. He has worked on citizens committees on assessment practice and says he has spent three years investigating county and state tax structures to become familiar with tax problems and practices.

Crane assisted in organizing the Sonoma County Grange Credit Union and has been a member of the Bellevue School Board.

Constitutional Amendments And Intitiatives owned by a veteran with a ermanent and service connectd disability, and extends the xemption to the home of his idow until such time as she ay remarry. The amendment ould cost the state abou 50,000 a year, and benefit me 860 veterans.

Proponents argue that men sked to fight in wars, and who e maimed as a resul , deserve ch consideration from society. There is no formal opposition the proposition.

PROPOSITIONS 14 through 17 e designed to streamline the nstitution, according to their oponents. Propositions 14 and have been rejected previously by the voters.

PROPOSITION 14 — Exempts om civil service appointees of e lieutenant governor and one rson appointed or employed the Public Utilities Commison.

Proponents argue that the lded exempt positions are justied because they are for policy-making positions.

Opponents argue that the adtion of political appointments outside of civil service is a step backward because it expands political patronage and weakens the civil service system.

PROPOSITION 15 — Revises various miscellaneous articles of the Constitution, eliminating provisions dealing with such subjects as dueling.

Proponents argue that the measure will help make the Constitution, now wordy and outmoded in many details, a clearer and more concise document.

Opponents claim that the amendment would eliminate protection of veterans' job rights. Proponents, however, in a court-ordered rebuttal, said that the present language does not include such protection, thus the argument was untruthful. The protection is assured already by statute.

PROPOSITION 16 — Authorizes the Legislature to amend or withdraw a proposed constitutional amendment from the ballot by a two-thirds vote before a vote by the electorate, and requires the Legislature to call a constitutional convention within six months after an election at which such a convention is approved.

The proposition also provides that if provisions of two or more measures approved at the same election conflict, those of the measure receiving the highest affirmative vote shall prevail. This provision apparently would apply to Propositions 3 and 4, despite the Legislature's declaration that Proposition 3 would prevail if both it and Proposition 4 passed.

Proponents of the amendment argue it is needed to simplify procedures for constitutional conventions, and would allow the Legislature to correct error found in its proposed amendments before submitting them to the voters.

Opponents argue that the Legislature should not be permitted to change its mind so easily about ballot measures it proposes, and that procedures for constitutional conventions do not need changing.

PROPOSITION 17 — Repeals a constitutional article relating to social welfare.

Proponents argue that the measure will eliminate an article originally enacted to repeal another article that since has been repealed.

Proponents argue the proposition will eliminate wholly unnecessary language.

Opponents argue the proposition is too trivial and should not be on a ballot already too long and too confusing.

PROPOSITION 19 — Makes a conviction for loansharking a felony rather than a misdemeanor, thus punishable by a maximum prison term of five years.

Proponents argue the proposition will strike at the second largest source of revenue of organized crime, which feeds on the poor, members of minority groups and small businessmen with interest rates up to 150 per cent a week.

Opponents argue that the measure would limit unlicensed lenders to 10.5 per cent interest, while licensed lenders could continue to charge up to 36 per cent interest.

PROPOSITION 20 — A $60 million bond issue for recreational facilities for the State Water Project, largely in Southern California. The facilities would include $54 million for roads, parking places, camping and picnic sites, fishing, boating and swimming facilities, and $6 million for wildlife "enhancement."

Proponents argue that the measure is needed to meet recreation needs, and that without it the state will face costs of policing recreation sites without adequate facilities.

Opponents argue that the project, approved by the voters in 1960, was supposed to have included such amenities. More important now, they say, is acquisition of lands that shortly will otherwise be lost forever to public use.

Stereo Scene From Rock To Opera

By DELOS SMITH

Operatically four hours couldn't be better spent than in listening to the first complete recording of Hector Berlioz's opera, "The Trojans," in its original version. You discover a magnificent work of high genius.

It's about time. The composer himself never heard it performed in its entirety, as one piece.

It has been fragmented in many ways for performance; it has been misrepresented verbally and ignored musically. The general impression has been that it was impossibly eccentric.

LAST YEAR the composer's score was published for the first time. Last fall the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, performed it according to that score.

The recording by those performers is now available in a box of five records thoroughly annotated Philips-6079 002.

It confronts you with the masterpiece of a front row master. The thrust and point of its poetry, the intensity of its drama, the keenness of its characterizations, the beauties of its melodies and particularly of its orchestration, are all of irresistible quality.

In his efforts to get performance, Berlioz divided it into two operas. Since then posterity has assumed it should be two, if only because the whole was too much for an opera house evening. As it turns out it can be performed in five hours, about the time required for a Wagnerian opera.

AND IT is one opera, an organic whole indivisible. As Berlioz himself so often complained, his works too often got short shrift from the public.

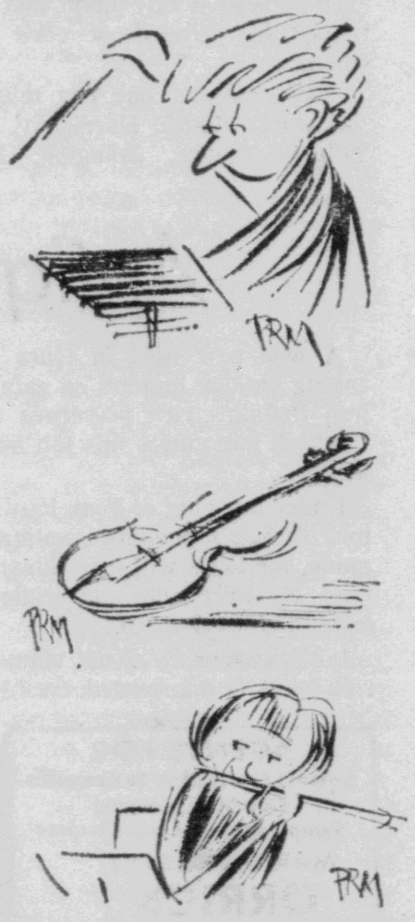

"The Trojans" is an example. Now, more than a century after its creation, amends are possible.

Since the complete opera has been performed so few times, this recorded performance has to be considered definitive for the time.

Its conductor, Colin Davis, gave it high musical polish. The principal singers were Jon Vickers, Josephine Veasey, Berit Lindholm, and Peter Glossop. They sang with dramatic verity and musical purity.

The Covent Garden opera also is responsible for a new recording of the oldest opera in the popular repertory, Gluck's "Orfeo ed Euridice." The magnificently voiced Marilyn Horne was the Orfeo and this alone makes it a performance that will haunt you for a long time even after one hearing.

Pilar Lorengar was the Euridice and made that character's contribution to the big effect a complete one. Georg Solti was the conductor and his realization of the classical score is altogether admirable. London OSA 1285.

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The legacy of recordings left by Otis Redding is small but of great quality.

In the months before his death in a plane crash, Redding cut about 40 sides that were awaiting release in albums. Some already have been made available and the remainder eventually will be released.

Twelve of Otis' songs are included on "Tell the Truth" Atco SD 33-333. Although Redding uses Lowman Pauling's fine song for his album title, most of the compositions are his own among them "I Got the Will," "Demonstration," and "Give Away None of My Love."

"I Got the Will" is an excellent composition in the Redding tradition. The lyrics are somewhat repetitious, and intentionally so, to give Redding room to underline and emphasize.

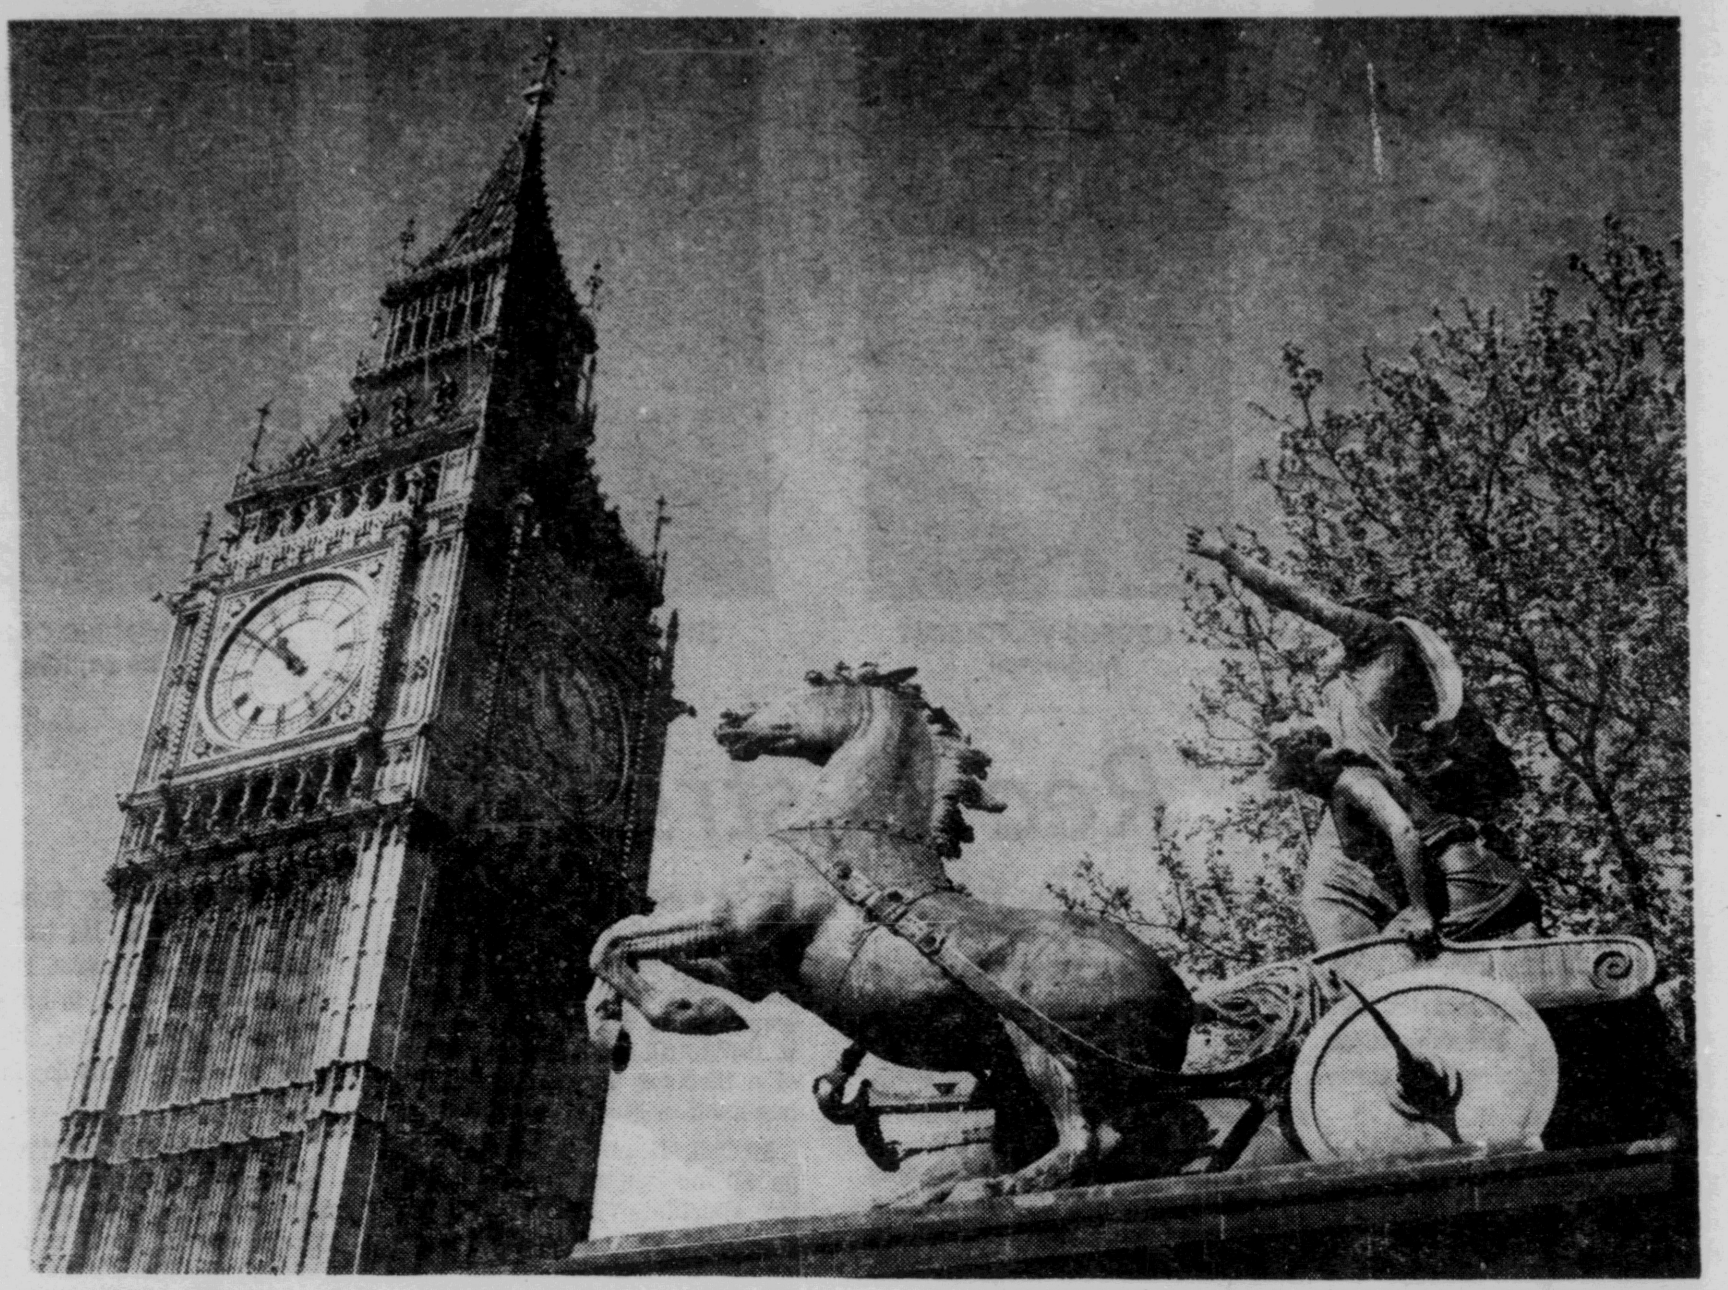

Arthur Prysock's latest album, which uses his name for the title MGM SE-4694, is devoted to ballads and blues of a steady loser. Prysock is second to none as a ball-blues singer and in this selection he embroiders the lyrics with rich and sonorous vocal textures.

SELECTED SINGLES — "Lovin Eyes" by Steve Clayton Spiral GS 3401, "I Got Love" by Melba Moore Mercury 73072, "I Am" by Fever Tree Uni 55228, "Open My Eyes" by Ashley Brothers Capitol 2809, "That's How Much You Mean to Me" by George Jackson Fame P-1468, "Sin's a Good Man's Brother" by Grand Funk Railroad Capitol P-2816.

TAPE DECK — Open-reel. "On Stage" by Elvis Presley RCA Victor TP3-1043 is the taping of a live performance by the king of rock at the International Hotel in Las Vegas. Presley is an impressive performer to watch and his energy comes through excellently on this reel. Eighttrack cartridge: "El Fantastica" by Jose Feliciano RCA Victor P8S-1598 is an excellent concert by this consistently good artist, but some of the depth of sound is lost because the tape has been electronically processed from mono to stereo. Only sensitive ears will notice it, however.

London Cabbies Trained

A FAMILIAR SIGHT in London, close by the famous, "Big Ben," is a statue to the memory of Queen Boadicea who, in 61 A.D. sacked and burned the earliest form of Roman London.

The familiar sight of the London taxi cab is as much an integral part of the traditional city scene as Big Ben and the imposing dome of St. Paul's Cathedral. The 'cabbie' is a walking encyclopedia and knows the London streets like the back of his hand. Which is not surprising when you get an insight into the intensive preparation and study he has undertaken to qualify as a taxi driver.

In no other city in the world are the standards set so high for the trainee cabbie. On average it takes eighteen months for him to qualify as a full-fledged taxi driver. Some take up to two years and more. Others never make the grade.

THERE ARE 12,000 cabbies in the London area operating some 8,000 taxis. "Recruitment is always good because people think it's an exceptionally well-paid job," Mr. William D'Arcy, General Secretary of the Licensed Taxi Drivers' Association, told Trans World Airlines. "Nobody can say exactly what a cabbie earns. It gives the job an air of mystique."

How does a prospective cabbie learn the job? How does he familiarize himself with the maze of London streets and city suburbs? It's not easy.

Let's follow a would-be taxi driver along the street of learning to eventual qualification. First of all a candidate for the job must make application to the Metropolitan Police Public Carriage Office. Here he is photographed, undergoes a thorough medical examination and is checked out by the police as a person of good character. Once this is done he begins the onerous task of learning the basic cab "runs." There are 460 of them set out in sections of 18.

THERE IS no short cut to learning these. The prospective cabbie — perhaps on a bicycle or a moped (motor bike) — armed with a city map, has to cover the ground of each of them.

For example, one run might be Manor House, Harringay, to Gibson Square, Islington. He finds these two points on the map, ascertains the most direct route and physically travels over it, noting all other key and smaller streets and premier landmarks on the route.

At both the point of origin and the destination of each route he draws a circle on the map covering a quarter mile radius around each. His job is then to cover this specific area and learn the streets, public buildings and landmarks in the immediate vicinity. Then, every month, he returns to the Public Carriage Office and is quizzed and his progress gauged.

When he has satisfied officials at the Public Carriage Office of his street knowledge, he is granted a requisition for the necessary cab driver's license. This important step signals a new course of learning — familiarizing himself with the routes to London's premier suburbs.

But before he graduates as a full-fledged taxi driver, the trainee must prove his driving skill and undertake a stringent examination, similar in part to the British advance driving test.

VISITING tourists have long benefited from the wealth of knowledge a London cabbie has of the city. Some 60 percent are Cockney, and perhaps this is the secret of their success as guides ex officio. The London cabbie has given many a visitor his introduction to London's Chinatown with its little eating houses watched over proudly by aged Orientals who remember the days when Tong warfare raged in the streets.

Antique Safaris In Britain

A wild new idea in tours is taking antique hunters on safari into Britain's rich preserves of fabulous antiquities this fall and winter.

Under the wing of Tony Keniston, Britain's premiere antique guide, the tours will take advantage of lower fall and winter fares and hotel rates.

It's a chance to spend unhurried hours in uncrowded, freshly stocked shops, with expert advice.

IT'S ALSO the time of year to savor the delights of cozy, firelit brass-andironed Britain, and discover the Dickensian comforts of old country inns as well as new city hotels.

The tours are 15-day adventures that can be tailored to suit the exact needs of the individual traveler. They expose the tourist to all manner of British antiques, but also let him rub shoulders with experts in the field and put him in touch with outstanding as well as little-known dealers.

For those whose interest in antiques is minimal, the Safaris are a marvelous way to soak up British scenery, country houses, and history.

The tours were organized for BOAC by Keniston, an expert at locating antiques. He's the editro of "Antiques in Britain," a thick guide book featuring his personal recommendations among Britain's thousands of antique dealers.

Travelers arriving at London airport are met by a hostess, who accompanies them to their hotel and helps plan how to spend the time in London.

Tours can be planned around a collector's special interest. If he or she wants to track down only porcelain, silver, maps, glass, toys, clocks, barometers, treen, metalware, pewter, rugs, music boxes, chandeliers, coins, medals, horse brasses, needlework or snuff boxes, that can easily be arranged.

Air Travel To Europe At Record

By MURRAY J. BROWN

NEW YORK (UPI)—Air fares to Europe must be 1970's biggest travel bargain.

How else does one explain the impressive boom in air travel to Europe during a year when so many other destinations are complaining about a lack of tourists?

During the first six months of 1970, according to reliable industry sources, air travel to Europe jumped 22 per cent over the same period in 1969.

There was an increase of 464,000 passengers to an alltime high of 2.5 million on the North Atlantic routes.

THE BOOM began late last year after members of the International Air Transport Assn. IATA agreed to cut transatlantic fares to new lows to stimulate business.

These bargain rates should remain in effect until next April 1. However, IATA reviews fares annually and there could be some increases after that date. So, if you've been planning to visit Europe, do it while fares are at their lowest in the history of commercial aviation.

The current fare structure is complicated and it is quite possible for one passenger to pay four times as much as another on the same flight from New York to London, Paris, Rome or other European capitals.

THE HIGHEST round-trip rate on the New York/London route is currently $750, first class, for individual passengers, effective year-round and valid for a full year.

The lowest fare is $175 for a passenger who is part of an affinity group of at least 80 members flying during a limited off-season period.

Between these extremes are scores of fares which vary according to class, departure date, length of stay overseas, whether you're traveling as an individual or in a group, and if you're a student, or a member of the armed forces or a dependent of one.

Depending on these factors and your destination, your round-trip fare can range from as little as $150 to more than $1,000.

The Travel Page

ALL BUT two of the more than 20 scheduled trans-Atlantic airlines belong to IATA and charge the same fares. The two exceptions offer the lowest fares.

For example, round-trip jet excursion fares to Luxembourg for individuals remaining overseas from 1 to 45 days are $210 from New York via Icelandic Airlines and $199 via International Air Bahama from Nassau in the Bahamas, a short hop from Miami.

A little knowledge about IATA's major fare categories can save you hundreds of dollars. First, let's check fare for individuals rather than group passengers for the winter season. All sample fares listed below are round-trip jet from New York to Paris.

Most expensive are the IATA "Regular Fares," effective year-around. If you plan to remain overseas less than 14 or more than 45 days, you must pay the regular fare. Sample: $794 first class, $464 economy class.

"INCLUSIVE Tour" fares, the next category for individuals, are applicable for passengers who remain overseas from 14 to 21 days and who pre-pay at least $70 for ground tour arrangements. Sample: $301 plus the $70, or $371.

"Excursion Fares," the last category for individuals, offer big savings for those remaining overseas from 14 to 45 days. Sample: $331 for 14-28 days $275 for 29-45 days.

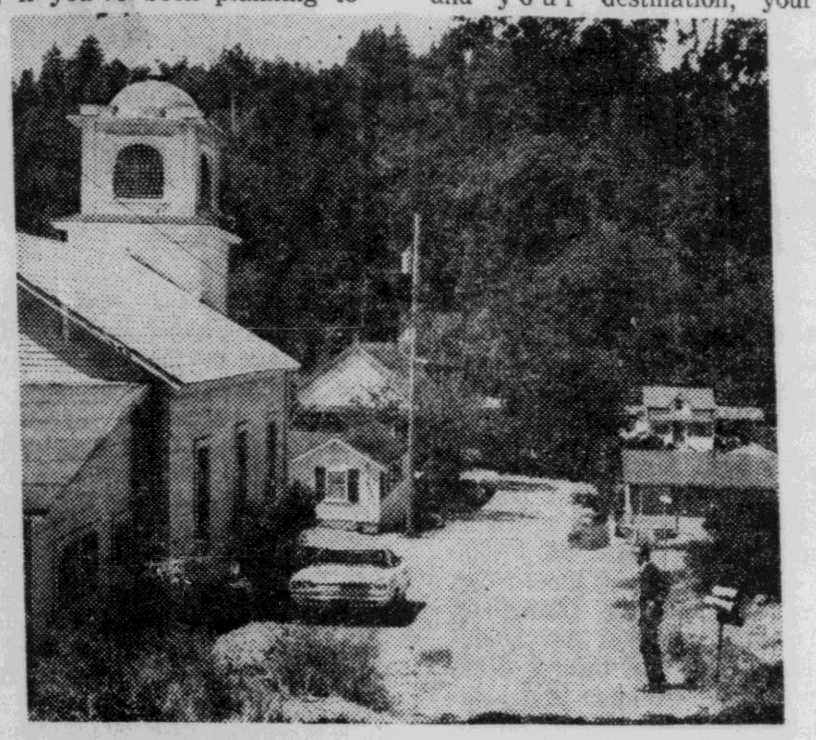

There are two basic types of group fares. One is for "Affinity Groups" comprising members of a bona fide organization.

The other is for "Non-Affinity groups," whose members must take the same east-bound and westbound flights together, but who need not belong to any organization. Such groups may be formed by individuals, travel agents or airlines.

TWO TYPES of fares are based on non-affinity groups. The first is the 14- to 21-day "Group Inclusive Tour," or GIT, for which groups of at least 15 passengers must be formed. Each member must pre-pay at least $70 for ground arrangements in Europe. Sample: $260 plus $70 for a total of $330.

"Bulk Fares," effective for an overseas stay of 14 days, require non-affinity groups of at least 40 persons who pre-pay a minimum of $100 for tour arrangements overseas. Sample: $184 plus $100, or $284.

The more members in an "Affinity Group," the lower the fare. Sample: $287 for 25 members, $205 for 40 members, and $175 for an 80-member group.

Occidental Is A Target For Sunday Family Ride

It isn't hard to remember a time some years back when certain Sundays were set aside for a drive into the country and a family dinner in some out-of-the-way place. The roads were narrower then, the pace slower, the trip to and from the outing spot one to enjoy leisurely.

There's still a place that's made to order for this kind of an outing, says the California State Automobile Association.

It's the little town of Occidental, sort of hidden away among the hills of Sonoma County not far from Sebastopol.

THERE'S NO freeway leading in to this quiet place, not even a major highway — just beautiful, winding roads that are meant to be driven leisurely while all members of the family enjoy the scenery.

Occidental gets its name from the Methodist Church which was built in 1876 and which rises above most of the homes and stores from its vantage point a block up from the main street.

Earlier, the town had been known as Howard's Summit Station, named after William Howard who came here in 1849 and was one of the first settlers. For many years the principal activity in Occidental was lumbering, but many trees were spared and even now the hills surrounding the little town are covered with mature stands of pine, fir, madrone, bay and even redwood.

ONE OF the more delightful old buildings is the two-story frame structure which you see immediately as you enter town from the south on the Bohemian Highway. It was built in 1879 by W.F. Taylor, a descendant of General Zachary Taylor. It now houses the Occidental Art Gallery.

After you have wandered around exploring some of the old homes and stores, take time to have dinner in Occidental. There are three Italian restaurants that serve family-style dinners. Everybody takes their time — the food is bountiful and delicious and you'll understand why so many others, like you, have driven to Occidental for an old-fashioned Sunday outing.

A Gentile And Jews

THE GOY by Mark Harris; Dial, 272 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Elizabeth Rogers.

After eleven years and a fair amount of practice in other literary forms, Mark Harris has written a second novel. In his own words, "I think I found out just what it is the novel can say and do that other forms can't say and do."

On the whole, "The Goy" justifies this statement, but it takes a long time to do it. Some further editing of the first half of the book might have produced a really first class novel. It isn't that theme or character are too slight for the development given them — somehow the pace is wrong. To compensate for this, the ending comes suddenly and with rattling impact. But it isn't until you finish the book that you feel you know what the author wanted to say.

The pivotal character, Westrum is a historian of note who is in the process of writing a journal of his life for the edification of posterity. He is being considered for a long-term fellowship or "seat" by an unnamed foundation or institute of arts. His position brings him (a Gentile) into close contact with several Jews. It is the interaction between these people and Westrum which forms the structure of the novel.

As a further complication, Westrum has a penchant for Jewish women — in fact, his wife is one and so is his mistress, and so, it seems likely, will be other similar alliances.

His father appears as an elder citizen of Nazi-like propensities. Is Westrum's liking for Jews a reaction to this attitude? He seem a larger-than-life personality — admirable in all ways — scholarly, athletic, self-appraising, humanitarian. But bit by bit we discover he is capable of the direct lie, intense rage, outright deception. He himself is bemused by these contradictions in character.

Because his own background lacked warmth and emotion, he greatly admired the Jews " . . . he envied them for their talk, their frankness, their uncensored passion . . . "

He wants to feel close to his brother-in-law, but feels a barrier he cannot understand. Is his fondness for Jewish women merely a mask for anti-Semitism?

"Did he hate foreigners? Did he yearn to kill Indians like his grandfather before him? Was he the seed-bearer of fascism in America?"

And again:

"Every Jew had his Gentile, and Westrum existed . . . as surrogate Gentile guilty of crimes and offenses committed by persons who merely looked like him."

In the end we find that for all his excellencies Westrum is still the slave of his instincts, a liar, adulterer, dealer of crippling blows. The lesson seems to be that fascism lurks in all us goys, and that pent-up emotions are the most destructive kind. You can extend that as far as you like and make your own prediction for the world you live in.

In-Depth Look At Church

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH by John L. McKenzie, S.J.; Holt-Rinehart-Winston, 288 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Paul Brindel.

This is an in-depth look at the structure worship, belief and works of the oldest and largest Christian body in terms of what has happened since the Second Vatican Council, 1962-65.

Father McKenzie was the first Jesuit to teach at the San Francisco (Presbyterian) Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, 1966. He recently announced he was leaving the Jesuits after 40 years to become a diocesan priest, and would leave the faculty of the University of Notre Dame this fall to teach at DePaul University in Chicago.

Already in its second printing, this book has a Jesuit "imprimi potest,' and the "nihil obstat" and "imprimatur" of the Archdiocese of New York. Nevertheless, it seems likely that as with the author's earlier classic Biblical studies, "The Two Edged Sword," and "The Power and the Wisdom," this book will be found in more Protestant, Jewish and public libraries than Catholic.

For, the author looks at the past, present and future of Catholicism in terms of stark realism: "It cannot be simply what it has been . . . none of the earlier 20 ecumenical councils accomplished anything like this Council (Vatican II) . . . changes have created problems because they came in too great numbers and too rapid for many Roman Catholics to assimilate . . . had the church moved in the early 16th Century, the Protestant Reformation may well not have happened."

Father McKenzie foresees a dim future for today's conventional parish: "In 30 years or even less the large churches typical of the cities will have disappeared." He suggests that "floating" and "underground" parishes are more prevalent

Reviews Of New Reading

"than the bishops have authorized and know about."

Also, he fears "that the Catholic educational system faces an uncertain future," but insists "the gospel can be proclaimed without a system of schools. Possibly, the existance of the school system has allowed clergy and parents to evade their responsibility."

In his foreword, the author warned that "Roman Catholicism stands at what may be the most critical point of its entire history," and that he was not writing "an apology." Well, has he succeeded.

Theatrical Family Has Wild Streak

THE MAD BOOTHS OF MARYLAND by Stanley Kimmel: Dover, 400 pages, paperback $3.75. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The wild streak in the descendants of Richard Booth, London barrister — which in some of them turned into insanity — provides a red thread that keeps reappearing throughout "The Mad Booths of Maryland."

Except for that thread, Stanley Kimmel's volume is a biography of a theatrical family unequalled in this country, unless possibly by the Barrymores.

From the time that Junius Brutus Booth deserted his wife in England to flee to America with a beautiful Bow Street flower peddler in 1821 until the retirement of his son Edwin 70 years later, the name of Booth was never long absent from American theater marquees.

Junius Brutus became "the great tragedian." After his death in 1852, three of the sons born to him and the flower girl contended for the honor of succession to that role: Junius Brutus Jr., Edwin and John Wilkes. The junior Junius lacked sufficient stage presence to achieve the pinnacle, but became a highly successful theatrical manager. Edwin eventually equalled and even surpassed the triumphs of his father. But John Wilkes added to the stain already on the family because of illegitimate birth when he murdered President Abraham Lincoln in Ford's Theater in Washington. It required years forEdwin to live down that horror; it is remarkable that he was able to do so.

Besides the brothers, their wives and some of their children also trod the boards, including the daughter of an illicit liaison of John Wilkes which the family long kept secret.

"The Mad Booths of Maryland" was first published in 1940. The author has made numerous additions for the reissue as a paperback by Dover.

It is an absorbing biography of a remarkable family, several of whom were a little mad, and one of whom was very mad indeed.

Inside The Rock Scene

THE SCENE by Mike Jahn; Bernard Geis Associates, 210 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Francis M. Dozier Jr.

Here is another authentic exposition of the rock music world, the performers, clubs, groups and much more.

From his position as a critic for the New York Times, the author is undoubtedly privy to a wealth of information and he lays it on us.

The title of the book has two meanings. It is actually the name of the New York club which was the "in" place for the stars and their fans. It was a microcosm of the larger music milieu.

If you're looking for a story line, there is only a semblance of one. However, if you really only care about how the Rascals actually got started, how Mitch Ryder would react when realizing he could not sing like Otis Redding and how some Mill Valleyans are alleged to relieve their boredom, you will be so informed .

Intercutted with interviews by a groupie, a press agent and guitar player, what passes for a story goes like this. Lori, a groupie, can actually sing and play a wailing guitar.

She cuts a record which becomes an instant success and she zooms to stardom. At this point she discovers she is in love with her manager whom she has known for many years.

By the final pages, she has gone through several mental changes and is asking herself the inevitable question: Is this what fame is really like?

Life Of Office Drone

THE DRIVER'S SEAT by Muriel Spark; Alfred A. Knopf, 117 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Marji Parr.

This slight little novella traces the last several days in the life of a pallid office drone. As Lise's madness drives her inexorably to her fate, we observe her compulsions, as if through the eyes of a movie camera, a television documentary.

It is this cool detached style that distinguishes the book, by the author of "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie" and "The Girls of Slender Means." Perhaps Muriel Spark is an expert on the machinations of strange women, who, as in the case of Lise, destroy their neat lives when they find themselves in the driver's seat.

All There Is On Bicycling

THE COMPLETE BOOK OF BICYCLING by Eugene A. Sloane; Trident Press, 342 pages, $9.95. Reviewed by Gordon Parr.

At Last! A book — and a good one — on cycling. Riding the crest of a new wave of interest in this old and honorable sport Mr. Sloane has authored a timely and thoroughly enjoyable book.

Those who are cyclists have probably combed the libraries in vain, as I did, for information on any aspect of cycling. Here in one book is information on nearly all aspects of cycling.

Mr. Sloan, public relations director for the Midwest Stock Exchange, qualifies as a fairly straight member of society but he also cycles regularly from his home in Evanston to his office in Chicago which in the opinion of most would qualify him as a real cycling enthusiast. He was, in fact, featured in a recent Time magazine article on the growth of cycling.

It is apparent that much research has gone into this effort. There is a marvelous chapter on the history of cycling complete with old photographs of very determined looking gentlemen in long mustaches and knickers to go with their high-wheeled bikes.

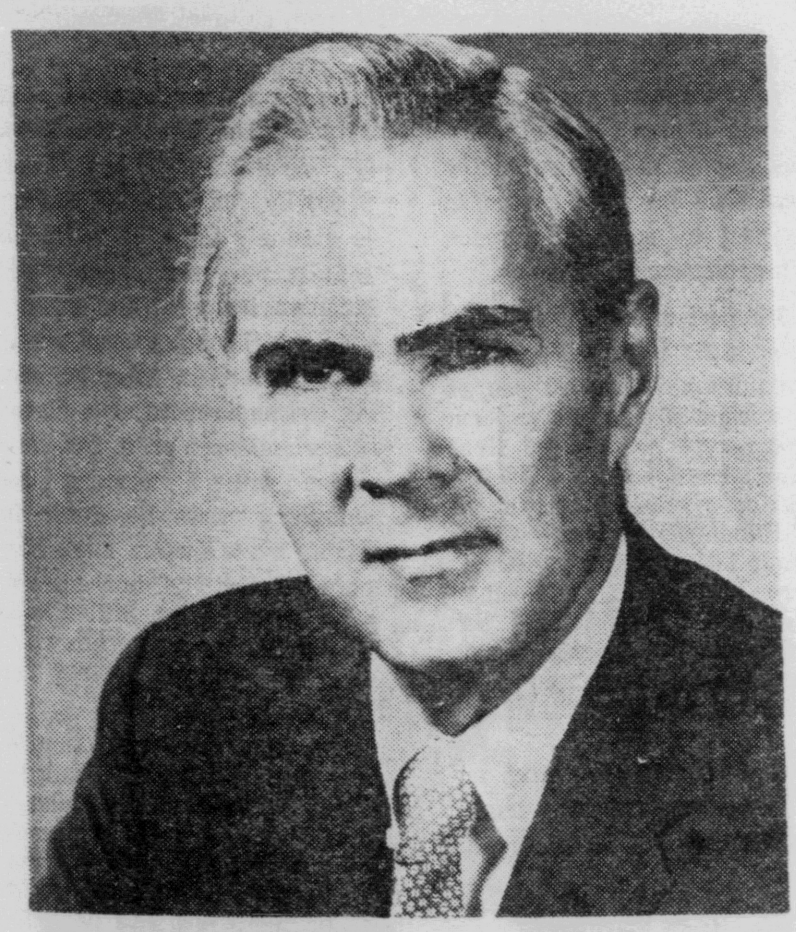

There are quotes from some of the early cycling magazines in Britain including this one which would indicate that George Bernard Shaw believed in equal rights for women — at least while they were cycling: "In my view the gentlemen who object to ladies having to stand the same treatment as is meted out to men are the same people who object to ladies cycling altogether, and therefore I do not think they need be taken very seriously."

The author, credited with ownership of six bicycles himself, does a very interesting representative survey of models he considers to be the best in each of three price brackets: low, medium and expensive. Of course, with a fast-changing market and allowing time at the printers, some of the prices and features discussed are already somewhat different but the comparison is valid nontheless.

For the serious cyclist, Mr. Sloane quotes former champions and their trainers on such things as diet, how to begin spring training, how to train for racing, selection of gear ratios, etc. And for the average owner of a bicycle, Mr. Sloane generously devotes over 100 pages to maintenance including 24 pages on tires and how to fix them, including sew-ups.

The instructions are explicit enough that most reasonably adept cycle owners should be able to follow them and save themselves at least $7.50 per hour — the labor charge at your local bike shop. Bicycle shop owners, incidentally, are so busy setting up and selling new bicycles that your maintenance problems will probably not be missed.

Auction Characters Fascinate

THE ELEGANT AUCTIONEERS by Wesley Towner (completed by Stephen Varble); Hill & Wang, 609 pages, $10. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

What is there to write about an auction house that could possibly hold the general reader's attention beyond a dozen pages?

Wesley Towner found plenty in the history of the Parke-Bernet Galleries of New York (now a subsidiary of Sotheby's of London) and its predecessors, the American Art Association and the Anderson Galleries.

The auctioneer-proprietors prove a fascinating cast of characters, dominated by Thomas E. Kirby for the first period and thereafter by Hiram Parke. But an even more fascinating cast is provided by the buyers of the paintings, sculpture and assorted objects d'art that passed under the hammer at the successive locations of the AAA, Anderson's, and Parke-Bernet.

From Mary Jane Morgan, the steamship owner's relict who filled a 26th Street mansion with European paintings, Chinese pottery and the Rev. Nathaniel W. Conkling of Rutgers Presbyterian Church, to William Randolph Hearst with his desire for the most of everything, to Charles T. Yerkes who collected art and mistresses with equal abandon, to a host of others — all are here in capsule biographies, written with the revealing but never cruel touch of a master.

There are other fascinating characters, too, such as Vitall (the Pasha) Benguiat, whose "magic carpets" somehow kept returning to a loft above the galleries no matter how many times they were sold, and Cortlandt Field Bishop, who bankrolled the auction houses, then ran it by memo and cablegram as he toured the world in a devoted to perpetual motion.

Towner wrote of them and of the art treasures they coveted and reject bought and sold, hoarded donated, with fascinated to ance, and with sparkling sight.

It becomes quite obvious t he fell in love with his subj One gets the definite impres that Towner found so many ries in "The Elegant Au creers" that he could not le off writing, and might h gone on for volumes — with publisher chomping in imp ence

As a matter of fact, he ne did finish the book. He died 1968. Hill & Wang got a Colu bia graduate student, Step Varble, to write the final ch ters. They are definitely not to Towner's standard. But t scarcely could be: Varble just doing a job; Towner pursuing a romance.

THE MALCONTENTS by Steve Franklin; Doubleday 185 pages, $4.50; reviewed by Mary Leydecker.

This little tale of a thirty-ish bachelor engineer who becomes embroiled in an international plot — involving computers, of all things, is a tidily written Crime Club selection.

Sterne saw it as a chance to have a pleasant trip to France at company expense, but soon found that he had not l let into several important tails of the mission.

Sterne soon finds h i m s seeing France not as a f class torist but as a fug from the law after he fle murder scene.

It all ends well, of co and Sterne seems to have manently shed his dull ro that of an adventurer.

Some New Books For Junior Readers

The Italians, the Scandinavians and the Welsh all have laid claim to having produced the first discoverer of America.

The case for the Welsh is explored by librarian, writer and teacher Ellen Pugh in her "Brave His Soul" (Dodd, Mead, $4).

The jacket says it is "The story of Prince Madog of Wales and his discovery of America in 1170."

It is not so much an account of the prince's adventures, however, as it is a weighing of the evidence as to whether the exploit did or did not take place. While intended for young readers 12 and up, adults interested in the controversial subject will find it interesting and enlightening.

Unhappily, Mrs. Pugh can reach no definite conclusion on the central question, although generally her evidence — Welsh Indians? — as reviewed serves to strengthen rather than weaken the Welsh case, inconclusive as it is.

But read for yourself and make your own judgment.

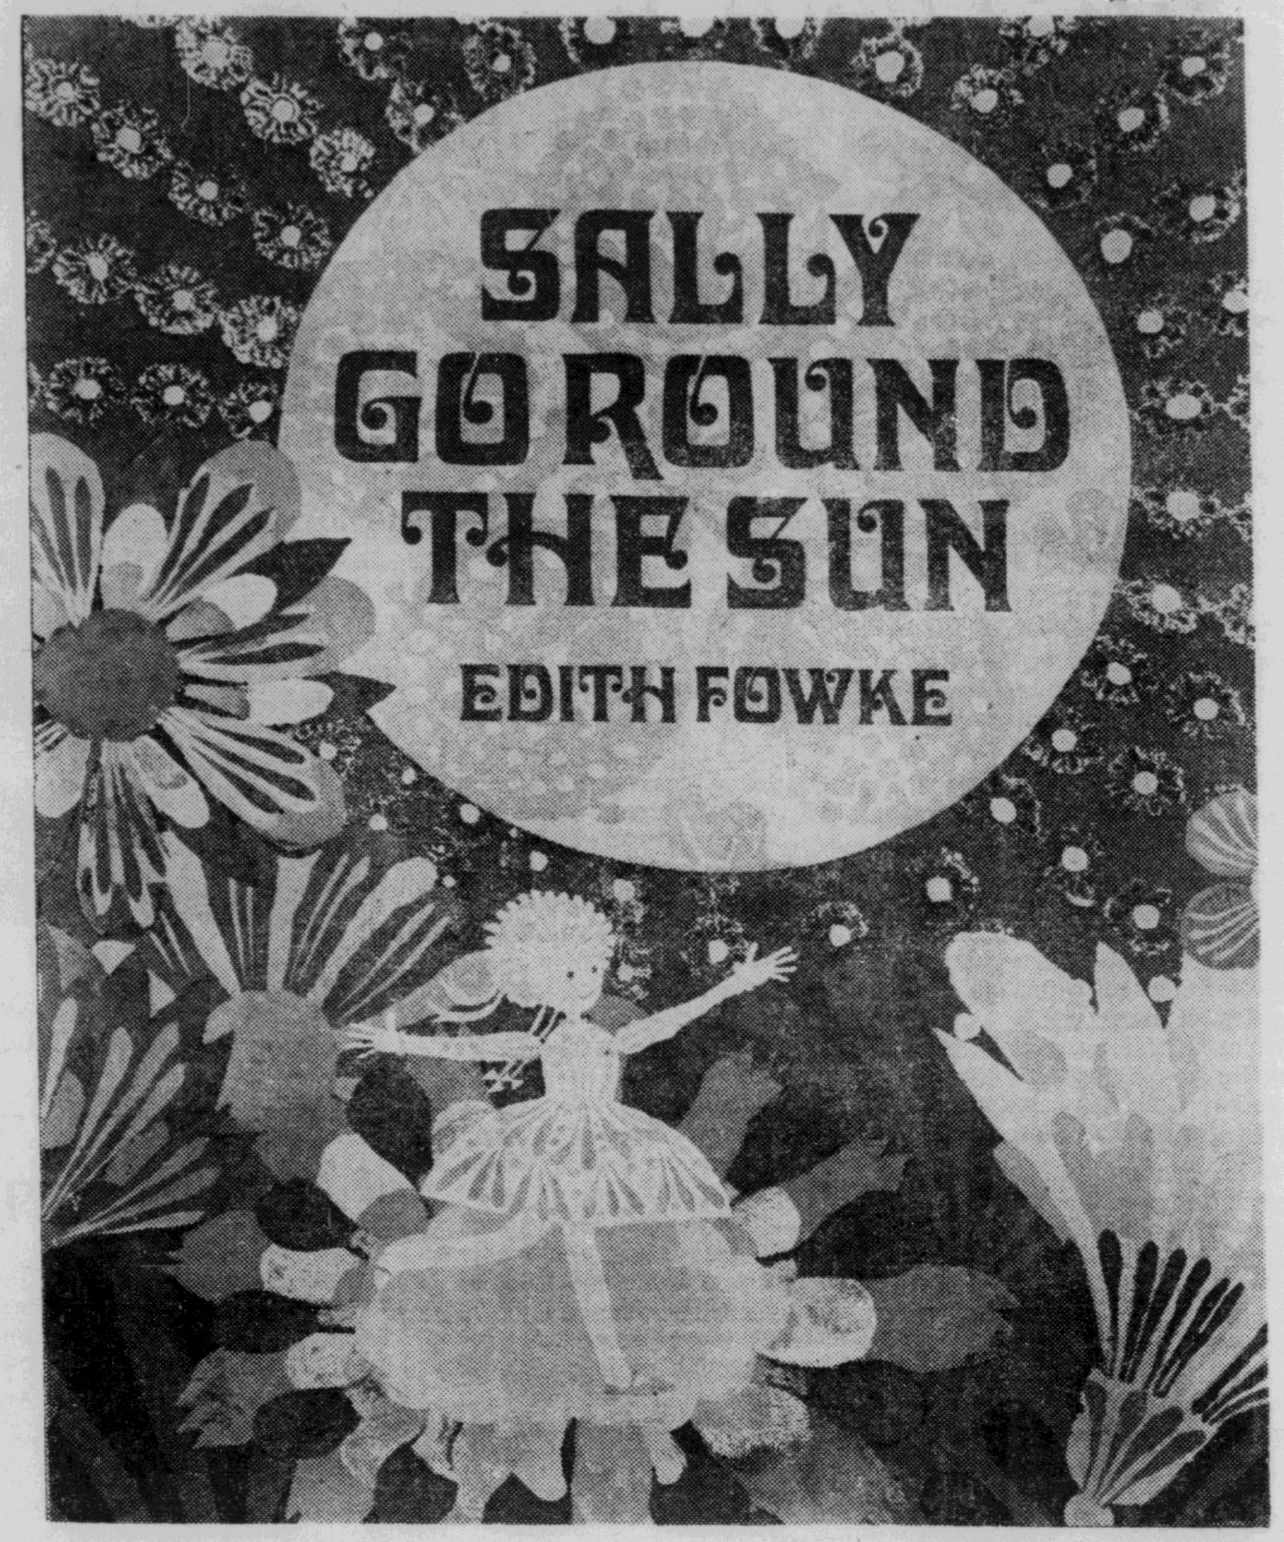

Some other new books for the juniors:

"Coming Home From the War" (Doubleday, $3.95) is an English translation of a book by James Kruss first published in German. It is the realistic tale of a teen-age German soldier in his defeated country after World War II, troubled by past memories, haunted by present fears. It is an uncompromising look at war and its harsh after-effects. And today's young people, many of them greatly concerned about the issue of war and peace, may find in it both a terrible indictment of the past and a message of hope for the future.

"Vaulting" (Stephen Greene, $5.95) by Elizabeth Friedlaender would seem to have a limited audience, since it deals with "The Art of Gymnastics on the Moving Horse," a sport in which few if any of our young acquaintances indulge. But the publisher assures us it is a popular sport in California. Mrs. Friedlaender is internationally known in dressage riding and thus fully qualified to provide the expertise. Illustrations include both drawings and photographs of young riders in action. And it is said to be the first book ever in English on the subject.

"British Castles" (Crowell, $3.50) by R. J. Unstead is not a picture book showing still-standing or ruined fortresses. But rather it is a history of how British castles came about — their purpose, their construction, their employment, their influence. But there is some guidance on what to look for when castle touring today. And the information has sufficient depth and detail to interest Britain-bound adults as well as youngsters. It is well illustrated with some sketches and more photographs.

The lowly fly is a vastly more complicated insect than first appears. Sigmund A. Lavine proves this in his "Wonders of the Fly World" (Dodd, Mead, $3.50) for budding young entomolgists. With the help of photographs he presents facts and evaluates legends about flies, and demonstrates that a good many of them are man's friends, not his foes. And he casts a somewhat skeptical eye at some of man's control measures, taking due notice of the harm that has been caused in the past by such interference with nature's grand scheme.

THE CANADIAN Association of Children's Librarians has given "Sally Go Round the Sun" by Edith Fowke, (Doubleday) the award as 1970 Book of the Year for Children. The book includes a collection of singing and clapping games, skipping rhymes, songs and tricks collected from children themselves.

"Mission to Tibet" (Scribner's, $4.95) is a rousing boys' adventure novel set in one of the world's most exotic regions. Teen-age soldier Tod Kent draws an assignment to Tibet to look for a scientist missing in the Himalayas because he happens to know a Tibetan dialect. There are bandits and other perils and hardships, not the least being the mighty mountains. And action aplenty to hold the interest of youths 12 and older.

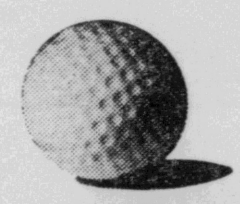

Pollution being very much an "in" subject these days and a cause of concern among youngsters as well as the more aware adults, "The World You Inherit" (Natural History Press, $4.95) by John Gabriel Navarra is a timely tome. It is the sad saga of how man began with a clean environment and soiled it, with a rich ecology and wasted and despoiled it. After completing the sad record, Dr. Navarra, a science professor, concludes with a warning that something must be done. He might, however, have been more detailed and more specific as to the remedies. Still it is an important book from which adults as well as juniors can profit.

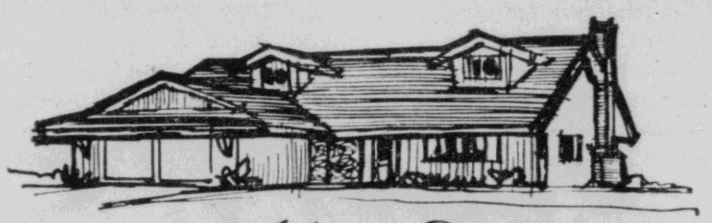

"The First Artists" (Doubleday, $4.95) by Dorothy and Joseph Samachson offers children up to 12 a quick and generally interesting study of cave and cliff paintings. Photographs of this primitive art add depth to the discussion. Youngsters with an archeological or anthropological bent or with an artistic talent and curiosity should find the book satisfyingly enlightening, although it does not pretend that history has as yet unlocked all the secrets of these very ancient paintings and their painters.

HALLOWEEN NIGHT

Halloween night is really a blast, and you try to get out there
be last!

Halloween, is where you stay out all night, you get a lot of candy,
its outa sight!

On Halloween night you don't see a movie,
Trick-or-treating is the part that's groovy!

Halloween is where the moon is bright,
I'll never forget it:
HALLOWEEN NIGHT!

AUTUMN

Across the Land
the morning mist covers earth, and souls gather the dew.

Breath in the wind,
Where distant shores
Await the coming sea.

Autumn leaves falling . . .
a moment in space . . . ,
discover shadows of another season.

LARKSPUR — DORIS M. RUTH

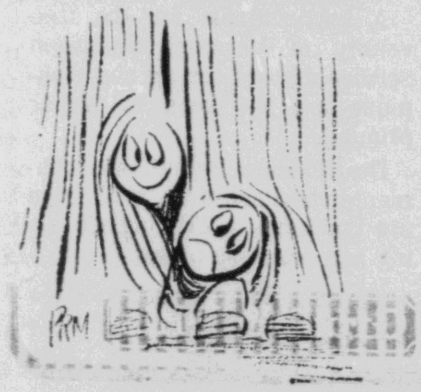

MORNING IN MARIN

Misty, moisty was the morning,
Fog on hillsides lay;
Cattle rested in the valley,
Waiting for the day.

Birds flew out from sheltered treetops,
Moving on their way;
Sheep still huddled near the sheepfold,
Caught the sun's first ray.

Then Sol rose in all his glory,
Only slightly veiled;
So birds, beasts and fowl arose,
And the morning hailed.

Rose Planting In Winter

PREPARE AND fertilize bed. Dig hole 15 inches to 18 inches wide and as deep. Add quart of peat moss mixed with half cup of fertilizer. Mix well with soil. Form a mound in center and position rose on mound.

Most rose specialists, general nurseries and sales yards know that many people will want to get their roses planted this fall so that the bushes will be ready to burst into active growth with the arrivale of spring.

The nurserymen are aware too, that most gardeners have far more time to propely prepare their rose beds and do a good planting job in the fall than in the hustle and bustle of the spring.

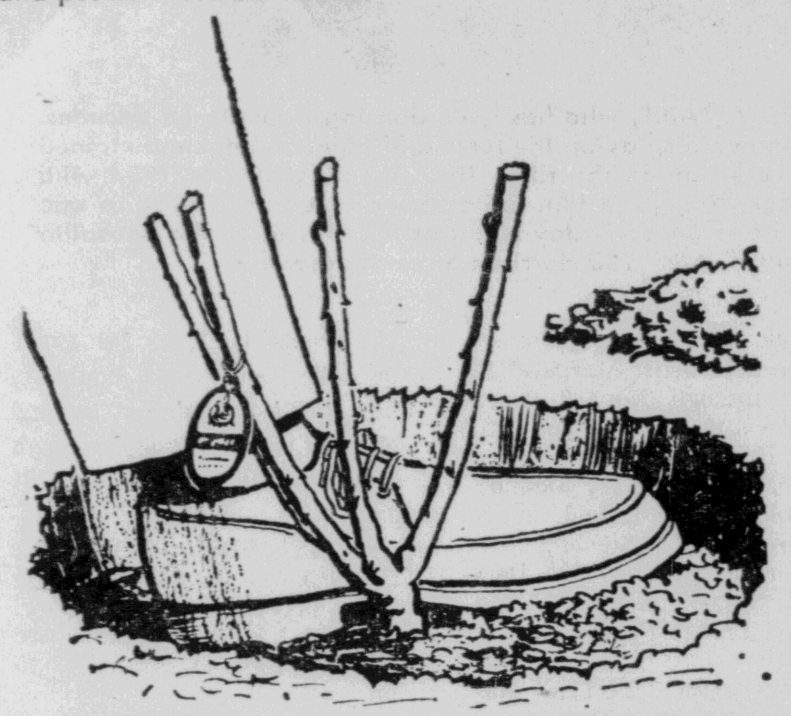

OF COURSE to set out roses at this time of year, you must be among that vast majority who dwell in the temperate areas of the country where fall is a satisfactory planting season.

Actually, fall planted roses make little or no root growth during that season, because the plants are in the act of dropping into winter dormancy. As the ground in which they are planted continues to cool, their dormancy deepens.

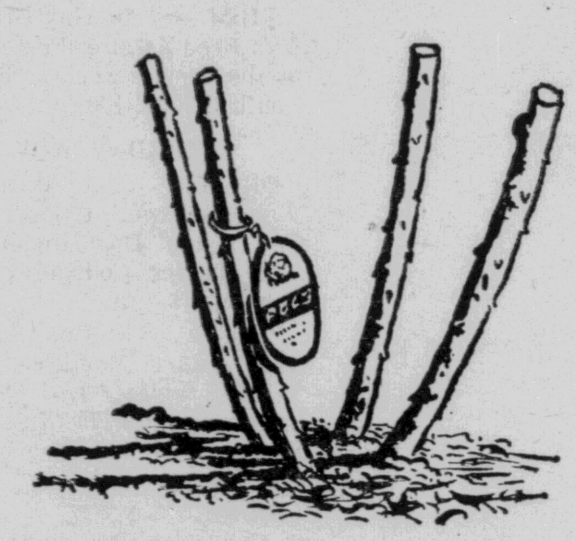

The primary advantages of planting in this season, aside from the availability of the gardener's time, are that the soil will settle firmly about the roots throughout the fall, and that the plants are established and ready to start active growth as the ground and air reach growing temperatures, usually long before most spring roses are available.

THE PLANTING of roses at this time of year is simple and easy. Merely carry out the few fundamental practices shown in the accompanying diagrams.

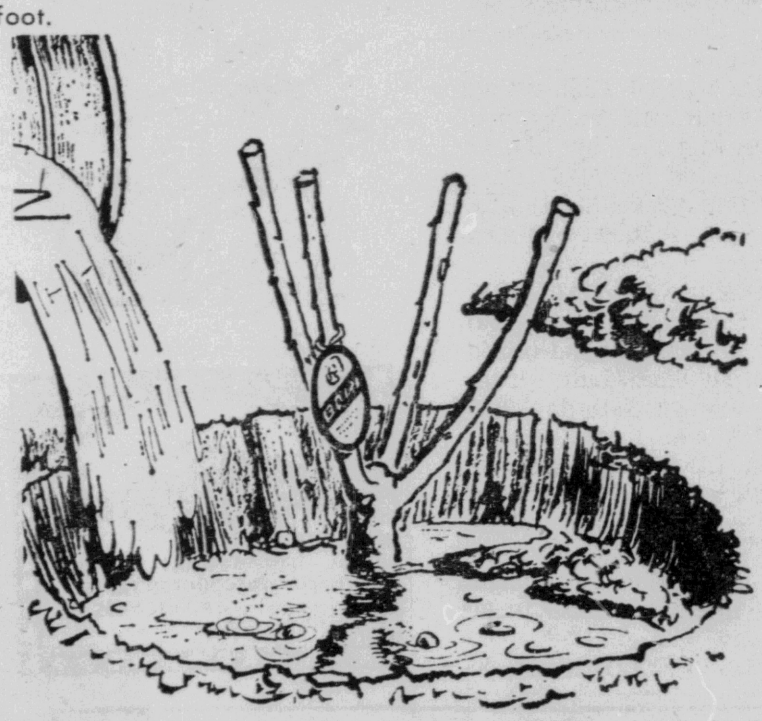

After you have your planting locations chosen and the ground prepared, bring out your roses, prune all canes back to 18 inches, trim any damaged roots with a sharp knife or garden shears and plant as soon as possible.

SEE THAT ROOTS are spread out naturally and that bud union (swelling at base of stems) is level with ground. Scatter several inches of loose soil over roots and firm well with foot.

THE FOURTH STEP is to fill the remainder of the hole with soil and tamp. The plant is now ready for the mound of soil which will protect it during the winter.

FILL REMAINDER of hole with water and allow to drain. See that bud union remains at ground level.

MOUND SOIL around and over plant to a height of 12 inches, and remove protevtive mound in the spring after growth starts.

Compost Heap Means Fertility

One of the cheapest and easiest ways to increase the fertility of your garden is to make a compost heap or pit.

Dig a pit three to four feet deep and as wide as you wish, lining the sides with boards. Then put in a six-inch layer of leaves, grass clippings, vegetable tops and similar waste plant material.

The layer should be sprinkled with a cup each of lime and five-10-five fertilizer, followed by a thin layer of soil. Wet the layer down and repeat the process. Compost should be watered often to keep it moist.

After three or four months, contents of the pit should be turned over. The compost will be ready to use the following spring.

An Expert On Pruning

A horticulturist for the University of Vermont Extension Service advises timing and technique are the keys to proper pruning.

Dr. Norman Pellett, an ornamental horticulturist, said there are two kinds of pruning: shearing and selective pruning.

Shearing is for formal hedges and helps maintain a rigid plant at a certain height and width while selective pruning deals with the way to handle most flowering shrubs.

As for technique, he said one-third of the older branches on the shrub should be cut back to the ground every three to five years to encourage development of new shoot growth at ground level.

"If your shrubs are getting too tall, trim out the longest branches back to a side branch.

Winter Can Be Colorful

What's nicer than having a gardenful of flowers brightening-up the winter scene? Being able to pick bouquets of many and varied flowers to enjoy indoors is, perhaps, a likely answer.

One of the nicest things about gardening in California is the color to be enjoyed from various annuals and shrubs in winter — when gardeners in other states are huddling indoors.

If you plant now, for instance, you can enjoy a winter color carnival created by a long list of annuals, which are easy to grow and require little attention for the abundance of beauty they provide.

Two cool season headliners are calendulas and Iceland Poppies. Both need as much growing time as possible before cold weather cuts them short. Which is to say you should hurry to plant, so that you can enjoy the maximum in color benefits.

CALENDULAS probably offer winter's brightest color. The original bright orange and yellow blooms have been hybridized by plantsmen to yield intense shades of golds and persimmon — as well as creams and yellows. Iceland Poppies have large crepe-like flowers adorning long stems. The festive colors range from white to gold and orange to pink.

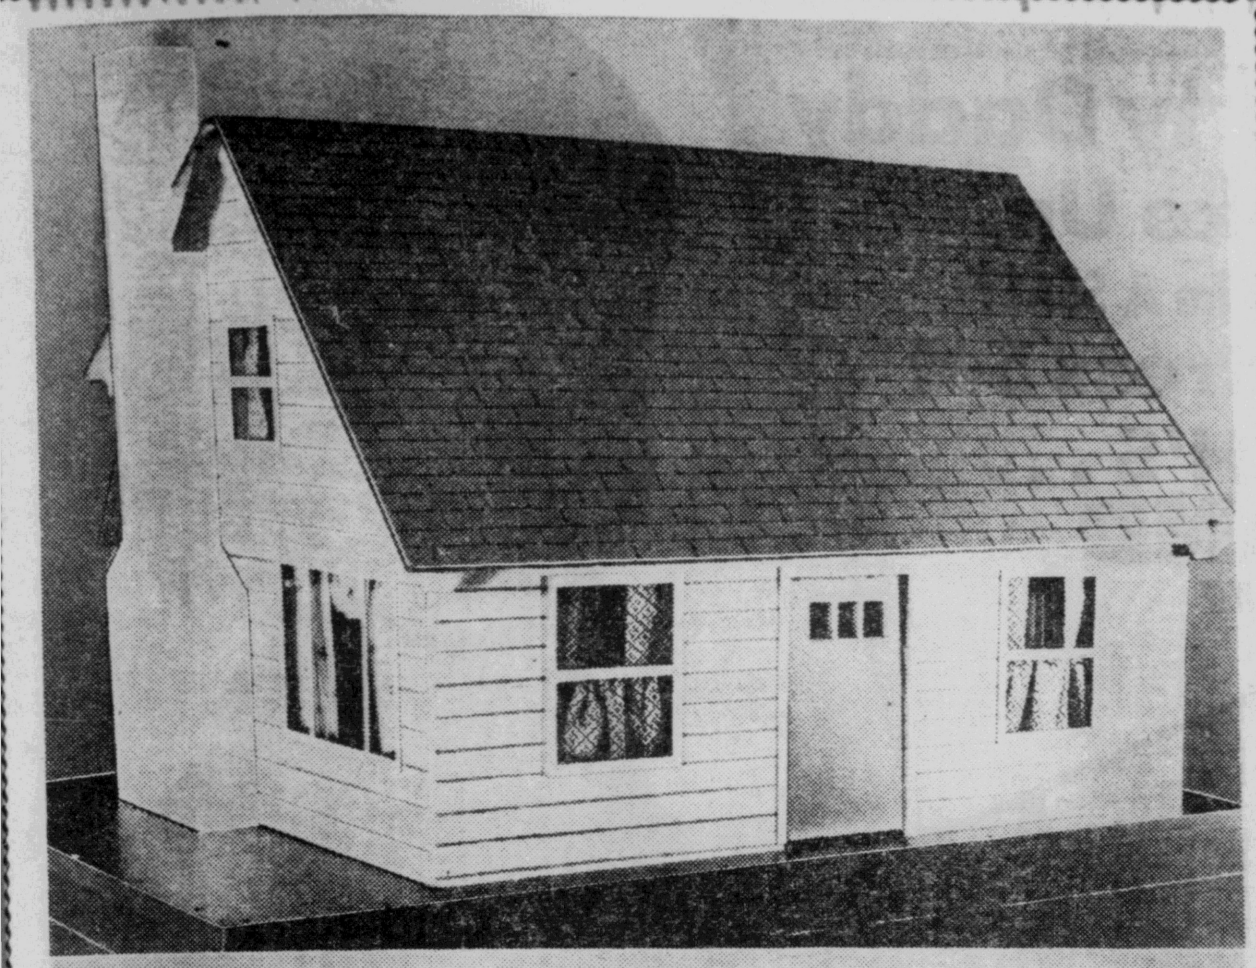

Don't overlook pansies and violas for a riot of continuous color. By shopping early you may find separate colors of this pair. This is true, too, of snapdragons and stocks, says the California Association of Nurserymen.

GARDENER'S CHECKLIST

Here's the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

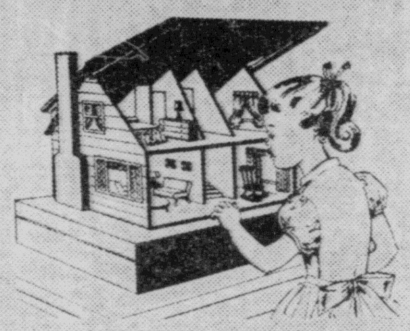

- Remove fallen leaves and other debris from the garden. They serve as breeding places for garden pests and diseases.
- Faded annuals should be uprooted and the soil turned. Many annuals may be planted now for bloom in early spring, including pansies, violas, Iceland Poppies, Fairy Primroses, snapdragons, stock, and calendulas.
- Plant Daphne odora for fragrant bloom during the winter months. Give it good drainage in a partially-shaded area.
- For a portable display, try planting daffodils in pots.

Outdoor Lighting Aid To Beauty Of Land

By DOROTHEA BROOKS

Imaginative lighting can help capture the beauty of your lawn, garden and patio after sunset.

"Outdoor lighting" has come far from the days of a glaring spotlight on the garage. There are light fixtures to enhance the enjoyment of all outdoor activities, whether a family barbecue, entertaining, recreation or just relaxing.

But, American Home Lighting Institute experts say, it takes a special kind of light to bring out the natural beauty of flowers and foliage, trees and lawns, even outdoor furniture.

COLOR characteristics are best captured by using colored light sources. You cannot generate the same amount or kind of light as the sun, which is nature's way of rendering color, and it is impractical to try imitating moonlight, which is only reflected sunlight and tends to flatten or "whitewash" colors.

The Institute suggests instead:

Amber to enhance the color of wood — a natural wood fence, for instance; a paneled garden room, your natural wood furniture.

Blue-white, particularly effective in bringing out the tones of roses and generally effective with green or red foliage.

PINK for highlighting pink flowers and reddish-purple foliage. It also accents the color of brick and provides a natural light flattering to complexions.

Green does an outstanding job in pepping up evergreens, the lawn or any green foliage.

Blue-green has a very cooling effect since it tends to tone down warm colors, an effect you might want to achieve in the evening with warm, vivid outdoor furnishings. Plain blue is not recommended as it casts a very unnatural color.

RED lends a campfire quality. You might want to try it for an outdoor barbecue or dining area.

Yellow, insect-repelling bulbs are important in unscreened areas.

The Institute also suggests a few things to watch out for. Don't use colored lights in excess. They produce the best effect when used sparingly — and skillfully.

THEY are not to be used as you would colored Christmas bulbs. The source of the light should be screened from view so the desired effect is achieved without distracting or annoying glare — to you or your neighbors.

Colored lights produce more heat than white bulbs — the darker the hotter. Don't place them too close to flowers or foliage.

Remodeling Can Be Gratifying

Remodeling an older home is a project to enter into with caution and to emerge from with joy.

Between the moment the decision to remodel is made and the project is completed, there may be a few dark days — when the furniture is scattered around the house; the plumber's truck squashes the English ivy; the family eats out three times in a row because the kitchen's temporarily torn up — and the aspirin, of course, is in one of those unmarked boxes in the garage.

REMODELING a house that's sound and, in the main, a satisfactory place to live, will be most gratifying if the owner learns all he can about the subject, plans carefully and chooses a reliable contractor who has been recommended by people he knows.

A good contractor knows how to save on costs, and also how foolish some cost-cutting can be. For example, he knows that patching a leaky roof to save the cost of a new one is wasteful, since a roof wears out all over, not in just one spot.

It's important to know the value of quality materials that will wear well and require little maintenance. Heavyweight asphalt shingles (290 pounds or more per 100 square feet of roof) are an example of such quality building materialsm They are designed to last up to 25 years. With the UL label for flame and wind resistance, heavyweight asphalt shingles, are an investment in long-lasting protection for a home.

THERE are many good books about home remodeling to buy or borrow from the library. with caution, bones up on remodeling guides sold on magazine stands are full of ideas and product information, and there are many booklets available from manufacturers and their associations.

One helpful booklet is "A Homeowner's Guide to the Selection of Quality Roofing," available for 25 cents from SR&A, Box 3202 Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017.

The homeowner who proceeds with caution, bones up remodeling, chooses a contractor carefully, insists on quality products, and checks the work carefully as it progresses, will eventually celebrate. He'll be understandably house-proud and his whole family will appreciate the better quality of living wise remodeling provides.

Rigid Vinyl Output Up

A record total of nearly 800 million pounds of vinyl will be used in the manufacturing of building products in 1970, up from the 635 million pounds used in 1968. The figures include such items as siding, piping, conduit, flooring, wire and cable insulation, paint and coatings.

Rigid vinyl, the kind used in siding and other exterior house parts, can be exposed to sun, wind and temperature extremes without fading or deteriorating. While painting is not required, because the color goes all the way through, rigid vinyl can be painted in later years if a home owner decides to alter the color scheme.

Firewood Storage Outside

A blazing hearth is cheerful on chilly evenings, but storing the firewood can be a headache that few houses nowadays are designed to copy with.

Instead of stacking it in garage or breezeway where people can skin their shins on it, build outdoor storage for that supply of hard fuel.

Basic objectives are to shield it from soakings by rain or snow, and to keep it off the ground. This calls for a platform and some kind of roof .The structure can be kept simple adn open, but still attractive.

ONE STYLE can be erected this way:

Set two treated western wood posts in the ground at opposite ends of the fuel shelter, say six or eight feet apart. Their height will be to the roof peak, and six by six-inch size is about right. Nail two two by sixes horizontally across the posts above ground level.

Wood can be stacked across their upper edges, but if a floor is desired, one about two feet wide can be fashioned from short two by fours or boards.
